DANGER FROM OVEREATING.

Insanity Often Caused by Too Liberal Indulgence In Food.

It is well known to the few medical men that many cases of insanity are directly due to overeating and the consequent absorption into the circulation of toxic matters from the intestinal tract, and melancholia, whether in mild or severe form, is generally due to this cause. Violent paroxysms of temper, whether in children or adults, are often properly referable to a bad state of the blood from this auto toxemia, as are indeed the exceedingly exuberant spirits of old or young at times. Just as we observe in alcoholic poisoning, some individuals are made temporarily jolly and good natured; others are made ugly and unreasonable.

In view of this condition of affairs isn't it rather a wise plan for us all to consider rather the needs of the organism for food than the mere question of palate tickling, to aim to eat good instead of bad food and enough of it—that is, not too much—to have the conditions about right when we take our meals; in brief to try and treat our bodies decently even though we act from a purely sensual point of view? In no other way can we secure the highest possible degree of pleasure on the average, while by acting thus sensibly we may enjoy practical immunity from disease.

The more exercise we take under proper conditions, the more we are exposed to cold, and the clearer we keep from excess in clothing the more we may eat; hence, in order to enjoy the fullest measure of table pleasures, we must live actively, wear as little clothing as is consistent with comfort and do considerable "roughing"—sometimes called hardening. With all this we should take our meals at times when the body or brain is not overtired, and when we "have leisure to digest," and, of all things, we should never eat unless we are hungry. To eat without an appetite is self abuse, of the most stupid sort, since it affords no pleasure and is productive of disease.

NOT IN THE PLAY.

A Case Where Two Actors Displayed Presence of Mind.

A short time ago a great historical play was being given in an Italian theater. The king had to read his speech from the throne. He was surrounded by the court, all the representative nobles of the nation, the governors of the provinces and the heads of the army.

The World's Fair.

"There is one thing I like about said the intimate friend, "and that your lack of vanity. You don't propose to be the greatest actor the world ever seen."

"No," answered Mr. Storm Barnes thoughtfully, "but I would if the world would only come to me."

ODESSA.

The memorial service in honor of our late sovereign the Queen, on Saturday last was well attended.

The Methodist church was crowded with people anxious to pay the last tribute of respect to one whom they had learned to love.

The Rev. F. T. Dibb, rector of the Anglican church, preached a very impressive sermon.

Rev. Mr. Crain, of Bath; Rev. D. C.
Day and T. Clyde, of Wilton; Rev. T.
S. McKee, Drs. Meacham and Mabee, of Odessa, also spoke in reference to our late Sovereign.

Prof. Beal, of Brockville, has opened up a very successful singing school in our village. The class is held on Monday and Tuesday evenings in Mabee and Williams' hall.

One of our married men has become quite partial to some of the young maids of this village.

Daniel Rose a resident of this place for some years, died at his home on Sunday last and was buried on Tuesday of this week.

Mrs. John S. Aylesworth, of Selby, is visiting friends in this vicinity.

The many friends of Mrs. Geo. Bell will be pleased to hear she is recovering.

The dance held on Monday evening last was not as well attended as was anticipated owing to the big storm that prevailed all day.

NATURE'S LESSON.

Is there a cloud in the azure sky
That forgets the mission it hath on high?

Not one.

Is there a star in the curtain of night
That forgets to shine with a radiance bright?

Not one.

Is there a bud in field or bower
That forgets to blossom into a flower?

Not one.

The clouds, the stars and flowers bright
In a beautiful language speak forth God's might,
While we, frail creatures of the dust,
Forget, alas, to be even just.
We stand empty handed, while all around
There are lives to brighten, now sorrow bound.
There are deeds which our hands should gladly do
That would cheer some heart its journey through.
A kind word here, a good deed there,
Would scatter sweet blessings everywhere.

Mr. Nelson Allan and daughter left on Tuesday for their home at Brandon, Man.

Mrs. Sarah Wilson, relict of the late A. Wilson, died on Wednesday. The funeral took place on Friday. The remains were placed in the Tamworth vault.

Memorial services were held in the English and Methodist churches here on Sunday last. The interior of the sacred edifices were draped in deep mourning, which scene created a feeling of sorrow and reverence the moment the church was entered. Rev.
Mr. Kemp officiated at the Methodist service, and Rev. Mr. Jones conducted the Anglican. The churches were crowded and the congregations were perfectly in sympathy with the solemnity of the occasion. The proceedings throughout were listened to with the greatest interest. The influence for good that was always exercised by our late Queen was impressed upon all by the clergymen.

Mrs. D. Allan, Mrs. Geo. Laughlin and Mr. A. D. Allan are on the sick list.

Foreman T. McHenry, W. Tripp, W.

Tweed on Monday. A reception, in honor of the newly married couple, was given at the residence of the bride's father in the evening.

The terrific snow storm which raged
all day on Monday, has made the roads

avoid the drifts.

The upsetting of a cutter and a display of mystic revolutions by its occupants was a scene witnessed on Queen street on Sunday. No damage was done.

A RAW YOUNG LAWYER.

His First Case Introduced Him to Contempt of Court.

Some of the members of the bar were discussing contempt cases because of a recent notable event in the state, and one of the little coterie related a personal experience.

"I read law at home and had my examinations through a little country lawyer who knew a great deal, but never had a big case and was notorious for his ability in abusing justices of the peace. It may seem a preposterous statement, but I had never heard or thought of such a thing as contempt of court when I had my first professional experience in a common pleas court. No sooner had the opposition attorney made an objection than the judge ruled against me.

"I proceeded to inform him that he was wrong, that he knew he was wrong and that I wished he would quit his pettifogging. The lawyers in attendance were temporarily petrified;
the venerable judge glared at me over his glasses, finally smiled in a forgiving sort of way and told me to proceed. Very soon there was another well taken objection, and again he ruled against me. This practically took the props from under my case, and I went at the judge as my instructor had been accustomed to go at a justice of the peace in a back township.

"Your honor," I declaimed, "is a political accident. In the eternal fitness of things you should be digging coal or clearing out underbrush. You have no more sense of justice than a Zulu chief of mercy. Thank heaven there is a higher judicial tribunal in this state that— But there I was halted by a fine of $200 or 90 days in jail. The judge took me to his private room, where he learned my story and remitted
the fine. To pay $200 at that time would have pauperized me. I now have quite a reputation for never rubbing the court the wrong way."

A Kali and Kipling Medley.

Mr. Barrie was one day at Waterloo station in a hurry to catch a train. He was hastening from the bookstall laden with papers, "a good many six-penny ones among them," he dolefully relates, when, in rushing around a corner, he fell into the arms of Rudyard Kipling, equally in a tearing hurry.
They turned on each other with scowling faces, then smiled in recognition and asked each other whither he went. Then Kipling, exclaiming,
"Lucky beggar, you've got papers!"
seized the bundle from Barrie, flung him some money and made off. "But you did not stoop to pick up his dirty halfpence, did you?" queried one of Mr. Barrie's hearers amusedly. " Didn't I, though?" returned Barrie, and added usefully, "But he hadn't flung me half enough."

FROM COWES TO SPITHEAD

Remains of the Queen Removed From Osborne.

Britain Surrounds Her Royal Dead With Tragic Splendor — Magnificent Naval Spectacle—The Alberta, Bearing the Remains of the Queen, Passes Through a Lane Formed of Great Warships—Boom of Cannon and Funeral Dirges.

From Osborne to Spithead.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Feb. 1.—The funeral procession started from Osborne at 1.40 p.m.

Previous to the removal of the Queen's remains the Bishop of Manchester held a service in the Chapelle Ardente.

The coffin reached the Alberta at 2.25. Great silent crowds witnessed the progress of the procession to the pier.

The Alberta, with the late Queen Victoria's body on board, started from Cowes at 2.55 p.m.

After the body had been embarked on the Alberta King Edward boarded the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert in a launch, and the procession started.

The Naval Display.

Cowes, Feb. 1.—With grand, yet mournful, display of naval pomp and power, the body of Queen Victoria was borne this afternoon from its quiet resting place in Osborne House to Portsmouth, the heart of England's navy. Not in history has anything been seen which in tragic splendor approaches the naval spectacle to-day. Over the still water between the roll of the six-pounders came the dirge of Chopin's and Beethoven's funeral marches. The crews, accustomed to cheer with the heartiness which belongs only to "Jackies," stood silently along the decks, and the flags, which usually float defiantly in the breeze, drooped half way down the halyards. The most powerful fleet England could gather together on short notice lay inert and silent, save for the mournful strains of the bands, and the woeful sounds of guns, that betokened neither peace nor war, but death.

Past these and past the Hohenzollern, the huge though cumbersome Camperdown, the Rodney and the Benbow, on through the line of British battleships—still on till Japan's Hatsu, the biggest battleship in the world, was left astern, and the German Baden was beam to beam with Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Holdsworth Rawson's splendid flagship, the Majestic, of the Channel squadron, the naval funeral procession slowly steamed. Ahead were eight destroyers, and seldom have these speedy craft drawn their long black hulls so sluggishly through the water.

The Casket on the Alberta.

Coming slowly after them was the Royal yacht Alberta. Half screened by the awning on the poop was the Royal coffin, placed on a crimson by marines and sailors, while Barrow Island was manned by boys from the training ship St. Vincent and men from the gunnery ship Excellent.

Alberta Moored For the Night.

When the Majestic had been left astern the Alberta was moored for the night. To-morrow the body will be taken ashore at Portsmouth and thence conveyed to London and Windsor for the last tributes to the great Queen.

The land ceremony, consisting in bringing the coffin from Osborne House to the pier at Cowes, was scarcely less interesting than the naval function. At noon the gorgeous trappings of the Chapel Ardente were disturbed. Over the coffin was thrown the coronation robe worn by the girl Queen. On this was placed the Royal regalia, the wand, the sceptre and the crown, which were scarcely ever used by the Queen in her lifetime, as she preferred the dummy regalia, which will be buried with her at Frogmore.

Sailors Carried the Coffin.

At 1.45 p.m. sailors from the Victoria and Albert raised the precious burden and bore it from the house. This duty was to have fallen to the Highlanders, but after the rehearsal it was decided that the sailors should be so honored. Outside the Royal residence the Grenadier Guards were drawn up in a brilliant line. With a sharp click they presented arms for the last time in honor of their dead Queen.

The pipers lead the procession, making the woods ring with a weird refrain. Behind them came the Royal family. At the gate the military portion of the parade stood ready, a glittering medley of uniforms. Down hill the procession slowly wound its way in the following order:

Mounted grooms.

D. A. A. G., southern district. Detachment of Hampshire Carabiniers.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the Isle of Wight and staff of the southern district.

The staff of the Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth.

The General commanding the southern district.

The Naval Commander-in-Chief. Massed bands and drums of the Royal Marine Artillery and of the Royal Marine Light Infantry, who commenced playing a funeral march as soon as they pass out of the Queen's gate.

The Queen's Highlanders.

The Queen's Pipers.

The gun carriage, drawn by eight horses, and preceded and followed by her late Majesty's equerries and aides-de-camp, escorted by the Queen's Company of Grenadier Guards, with the coffin.

King Edward.

Emperor William.

The Duke of Connaught.

The Crown Prince of Germany.

Prince Henry of Prussia.

Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein.

The Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

Prince Arthur of Connaught.

Prince Charles of Denmark.

Prince Louis of Battenberg.

Queen Alexandra.

The Duchess of York.

The Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein.

Princess Louise (Duchess of Argyll).

Princess Beatrice (Princess Henry of Battenberg).

The Duchess of Connaught.

The Duchess of Albany.

Princess Victoria of Wales.

crown, the orb, the standard and a few choice wreaths. King Edward, Emperor William, the Duke of Connaught and the Crown Prince followed the remains, and then came the ladies of the Royal family and the Admirals.

The silence of this mournful procession was broken by the firing of the guns, the strains of the funeral march and the sound of the wind-driven rain which was then falling in torrents. The coffin was placed on the dais, and Admiral Sir Nowell Salmon (Admiral of the fleet since 1899), King Edward, Queen Alexandra, Emperor William and the other members of the Royal family took their seats and the train moved off.

THROUGH LONDON'S STREETS

Britain's Grief Expressed With Stately Grandeur.

Mortal Remains of Earth's Greatest Queen borne in Solemn Pomp Through the Streets of the Capital—The Great Procession—The Military Display—The Illustrious Dead—The Order of the Procession—Features of the Pageant.

London, Feb. 2, 9.17 a. m.—The grey dawn of a London morning, with the sky draped with fleecy clouds, proclaimed ideal conditions for the funeral day of England's Queen. The calm serenity of the atmosphere was reflected by the crowds which at daylight began to assemble at every point of vantage along the route of the Royal obsequies. So soft, peaceful and noiseless was the progress of the ingathering hosts that the constantly swelling throngs and the rhythmic tread of the assembled troops seemed to accentuate the solemn stillness.

The early scenes were unlike those of many spectacular days which London has witnessed in the past year. The crowds which so early gathered in the streets this morning evinced an entire lack of feverish unrest and excitement. The great masses of people lue which assembled phantom-like in the greyness of the morning seemed more apologetically to tip-toe to their allotted stations, as though their presence reflected on the solemnity dominating everything. Never did a concourse of people so little need either civil or military guidance. No man standing by his mother's bier ever needed admonition less than did these hundreds of thousands of men and women gathered from all parts of the kingdom on the funeral route of their mother the Queen.

Women Outnumbered Men.

The strangest part of all was the fact that the women seemed to outnumber the men. White-ribboned nurses marked almost every yard along the route. Troops there were to be sure, thousands upon thousands, assembling spectre-like out of the morning mists, their blue-black

The Military Display.

The display of the naval and military forces reached the great total of 35,000 men.

The firing of minute guns and tolling of bells at 11.15 announced to the countless multitudes who were crowding London's streets since daylight that the final procession had begun its passage through the capital. The pageant fought for hours for a glimpse of the coffin and the Kings and following it. They saw a long procession of soldiers, a passing of dazzling regalia, with a hundreds of Royalties crowding after and dispersed, while all the chimes of the city were ringing muffled dirges were played.

Europe has seen grander funerals than the Queen's, and a more glorious spectacle in the celebration of her sixty years of life, but no episode in the Victorian reign will live so deeply impressed on memories of those who witnessed or participated in the ceremonies.

The day was sombre, wet and drizzling, as are most of London's days. The cloudy sky added to gloom of the whole city.

The scene at Victoria Station early morning was most brilliant and impressive. For to-day's ceremony the station was transformed into an immense reception hall. Trains were stopped before 9, the long platforms were covered with purple cloth. On another platform facing that at which the Queen's train was to arrive guards of honour composed of blue-jackets and Grenadier Guards, were drawn up. A broad roadway separating the was swept clean and sanded, a number of little purple-covered forms from which members of the Royal family were expected to mount their horses were placed at intervals at the side and centre.

Distinguished Officers.

At 10 o'clock an army of grey with the horses arrived, and forward distinguished British and military officers and their Royalties in dazzling uniforms in quick succession. The Lord Chamberlain and his officials, bare-headed with their white wands of office, received the most distinguished sonages and conducted them little pavilion erected on the form.

The whole station by that time resembled the scene at a levee. Commander-in-Chief of the Field Marshal Earl Roberts, a beautiful, spirited brown mare, rearing his Field Marshal's baton at this juncture trotted into the station and became the centre of interest. He was soon followed by the Earl Marshal (the Duke of Norfolk) and many of the distinguished British officers, who came carriages for the Queen and the Princesses. They were the carriages used on the occasion of Queen Victoria's jubilee, with their gold-mounted harnesses and plumes. The horses were ridden postillions in scarlet jackets, only a narrow band of crapes over their arms as a mark of the change. The carriages were closed.

The Illustrious Dead.

Following the carriages and led by an officer came an object which every officer in the army instinctively came to salute, and every head was bare. It was the little khaki-colored gun carriage which was to carry Queen Victoria's body from Victoria Paddington Station. The eight overland cream-colored horses drew the late Queen on the occasion of the jubilee were used to-day. Gold harnesses, the scarlet postillions and the scarlet and covered grooms who held each horse by the bridle were all the same. Only the little gun carriage in place of the glittering glass gold coach marked the change.

Benbow, on through the line of British battleships—still on till Japan's Hatsuse, the biggest battleship in the world, was left astern, and the German Baden was beam to beam with Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Holdsworth Rawson's splendid flagship, the Majestic, of the Channel squadron, the naval funeral procession slowly steamed. Ahead were eight destroyers, and seldom have these speedy craft drawn their long black hulls so sluggishly through the water.

The Casket on the Alberta.

Coming slowly after them was the Royal yacht Alberta. Half screened by the awning on the poop was the Royal coffin, placed on a crimson dais, the curtains of which were drawn back and tied to the four poles, leaving free to view the magnificent casket and the robes. Sometimes abeam, sometimes ahead, was the Trinity House yacht Irene, watching the course, while in the wake of the Alberta came the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, with King Edward and Queen Alexandra and the English Royal family; the Royal yacht Osborne, with other Royalties, the Imperial yacht Hohenzollern, with Emperor William, the Duke and the Duchess of Connaught and others; the Admiralty yacht Enchantress, and a Trinity House yacht, with officials on board.

The main squadron of battleships and cruisers was moored two and a half cables apart, in one line, extending from Cowes to Spithead. The channel fleet, under the command of Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Holdsworth Rawson, formed the eastern portion, and the reserve fleet, under Rear Admiral Sir Gerard Henry Noel, formed the western portion. The foreign war vessels were moored southwest of the British ships, in the order of their arrival, and alongside of them were moored eight British gunboats, the Antelope, the Gleaner, the Skijack, the Leda, the Rattlesnake, the Alert, the Circe, and the Speedwell.

A Lane of Warships.

After leaving Trinity Pier the Alberta, with her attendant escort, steamed along the deep channel between the coast of the Isle of Wight and the single line of battleships and cruisers. The main line was as follows, beginning at Cowes:

Alexandra, Campdown, Rodney, Benbow, Collingwood, Colossus, Sans Pareil, Nile, Howe, Melampus, Sovern, Galatea, Bellona, Pactorius, Pelorus, Diana, Conqueror, Arrogant, Minerva, Niobe, Hero, Hood, Tragafalgar, Resolution, Jupiter, Hannibal, Mars, Prince George and Majestic.

Minute guns were fired by all the ships in the Solent and at Cowes, commencing when the Alberta left the pier. Each ship ceased firing immediately after the tail of the procession had passed her.

After the procession had passed the Majestic the forts and ships in Portsmouth harbor commenced firing minute guns and continued firing until the Alberta was alongside the wharf.

No standards were displayed and ensigns and Union Jacks were at half-mast. The bands played the funeral marches of Chopin and Beethoven only. No national anthem was played.

On the approach of the procession the ships were manned and the guards and the bands were paraded. The officers wore full dress and the men in "No. 1 rig" and straw hats. The guards presented arms as the Alberta passed each ship and then rested on their arms reversed until the procession had gone by.

Nelson's Old Flagship.

A detachment of marines and the Admiral's band were on board Nelson's old flagship, the Victory, in Portsmouth harbor. All the sea front and dockyards were manned

The roadway from the gate to the pier was lined with troops in close order. The troops remained in position until the minute guns from the fleet commenced to fire.

Thousands stood bareheaded and watched the strange sight with loyal humility and grief.

At last the pier was reached and the body was reverently placed on board the Royal yacht Alberta by seamen of the Royal yachts.

A few moments later the torpedo flotilla was in motion and slowly left the Medina for the Solent. The massed bands played Beethoven's Funeral March.

As the Alberta passed abeam of the Alexandra the great vessel fired the first gun of the salute, which was taken up by the Rodney and the other warships.

From the island to the mainland all the ships were manned, and from the bands floated the sad strains of funeral marches.

THE DISEMBARKATION.

Remains of the Queen Transferred From the Alberta to the Train—Rain Fell in Torrents.

Portsmouth, Feb. 2.—Before 9 o'clock this morning the remains of the Queen were taken from the Royal yacht Alberta to a special carriage and conveyed to the King's train, which started for London at 8.53 a.m., amidst the boom of the guns from the forts. The scene was pathetic and imposing. The King, accompanied by Queen Alexandra and some Princesses, who passed the night on board the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, proceeded to the Royal yacht Alberta in a steam launch. King Edward boarded the yacht at 8.45, five minutes after Emperor William had steamed alongside the Alberta from the Hohenzollern. The guard of honor on the jetty consisted of several hundred marines and bluejackets.

The commanders of the warships which took part in yesterday's pageant had already assembled under the covered way leading from the yacht to the railroad station. There was a short service on the yacht before the body was removed, the Duke of Connaught, the Crown Prince of Germany, Prince Arthur of Connaught, Prince Henry of Prussia, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and Princess Henry of Battenberg being present. The only mourning garb visible was in the dresses of the Princesses.

Minute Guns Marked Its Passage.

The firing of the minute guns marked the passage of the coffin to the draped railroad station, to which it was borne shoulder high by petty officers of the Royal yachts, preceded by a clergyman. Immediately behind the coffin were carried the their allotted stations, as though their presence reflected on the solemnity dominating everything. Never did a concourse of people so little need either civil or military guidance. No man standing by his mother's bier ever needed admonition less than did these hundreds of thousands of men and women gathered from all parts of the kingdom on the funeral route of their mother the Queen.

Women Outnumbered Men.

The strangest part of all was the fact that the women seemed to outnumber the men. White-ribbed nurses marked almost every yard along the route. Troops there were to be sure, thousands upon thousands, assembling spectre-like out of the morning mists, their blue-black overcoats and bear skins deepening the note of mourning pervading everything.

In the great green spaces of Hyde Park, St. James and others these long black lines stood silhouetted against the morning sky, solemn, silent and picturesque, staunchly stemming the onrush of that endless flood of people pouring in from every street and avenue. Purple was the tone of the Royal mourning, and this seemed almost a relief contrasted with these silent masses of black-garbed crowds. It was the true note, after all, of the day's ceremonial, for no one among England's heart-stricken people could look upon the finished life of their Queen with feelings of entire gloom.

The troops began to move less early than on Proclamation Day. That was the day of the official announcement of the authority of the King, and the streets were closed as if by magic, and with a tone of authority that did not mark this morning's scenes.

Buckingham Palace, the great hotels about the Victoria Station, the princely homes in Park Lane, and every shop and house thence to Paddington bore ample evidence of the national grief, and, together with purple and white festoons, wreaths of bay and laurel were hanging from every lamp-post, while flags at half-mast bordered with crape told in a dignified, simple manner the story of the nation's loss.

THE GREAT PROCESSION.

A Military and Naval Display of Solemn Magnificence.

London, Feb. 2.—With every circumstance of splendid pomp befitting the obsequies of so mighty and well-beloved a monarch, all that is mortal of Queen Victoria was borne through the streets of the capital today in its progress towards the ancient fortress-palace of the Sovereigns of England. The solemn magnificence of yesterday's opening phase of these last rites was maintained fully. Perhaps the stately grandeur of to-day's sorrowful pageant through the swarming streets of London, with hundreds of thousands of mourners forming a black border to the route, will never be surpassed. There was in Victoria's funeral procession an absence of that black ceremonial generally connected with the final progress to the grave. Today the coffin was drawn by cream-colored horses. The pall was white and the uniforms of the troops and the gold trappings of the foreign Sovereigns, Princes and representatives forming a glittering medley, gave brilliant coloring to the scene. The chief mourner himself, with his Field Marshal's uniform—even though this was partially hidden by his overcoat—surrounded by his corps, helped to liven the symbols of mourning marking the route.

Never in English history has a Sovereign been borne to the grave attended by so many distinguished mourners. The gathering of crowned heads far surpassed those who rode in the jubilee procession, and all the great officers of state participated.

The Illustrious Dead.

Following the carriages and ceded by an officer came an object which every officer in the army throng instinctively came to salute, and every head was bare was the little khaki-colored gun carriage which was to carry Queen Victoria's body from Victoria Paddington Station. The eight overland cream-colored horses drew the late Queen on the occasion of the jubilee were used to-day, gold harnesses, the scarlet-colored postillions and the scarlet and covered grooms who held each a horse by the bridle were all same. Only the little gun carriage in place of the glittering glass gold coach marked the change of place for the coffin to rest was the actual gun. Rubber tires on the wheels, but this was the alteration.

It was then nearly 11 o'clock amid cries of "The King of Prussia's horse," "The Grand Duke Hesse's horse," and so on Princes mounted a minute ahead the time the train steamed into station.

All heads were uncovered as the train carriage bearing the Queen mains stopped exactly opposite gun carriage, and King Edward Queen Alexandra, Emperor William and others alighted. Then the party advanced to the saloon carriage. With his hand at the side and standing a little in advance of the others, King Edward watched painfully slow removal of the to the gun carriage. It was accomplished, and the pall and the red of the British crown were placed on the coffin.

The King and the others with them mounted and the procession started.

The Order of the Procession.

The procession passed in the following order:

The Military Display.

A display of the naval and military forces reached the great total of 30 men. A firing of minute guns and the ringing of bells at 11:15 announced to countless multitudes who had crowded London's muddy streets since daylight that the funeral procession had begun its passage through the capital. The people sat for hours for a glimpse of coffin and the Kings and others winging it. They saw a long procession of soldiers, a passing show dazzling regalia, with a hundred ladies crowding after and then in, while all the churches of the city were ringing and dirges were played.

A rope has seen grander Royal than the Queen's, and had a more glorious spectacle in the celebration of her sixty years of reign, no episode in the Victorian era live so deeply impressed on the minds of those who witnessed it as anticipated in the ceremonies. A day was sombre, wet and chill; are most of London's winter.

The cloudy sky added to the gloom of the whole city. A scene at Victoria Station from morning was most brilliant impressive. For to-day's ceremony the station was transformed an immense reception hall. All were stopped before 9, and long platforms were covered with cloth. On another platform that at which the Queen's was to arrive guards of honor, posed of blue-jackets and Grenadiers.

Guards were drawn up. The roadway separating the two swept clean and sanded, and a series of little purple-covered platforms from which members of the royal family were expected to mount horses were placed at intervals by side and centre.

Distinguished Officers.

10 o'clock an army of grooms the horses arrived, and thenceward distinguished British naval military officers and foreign allies in dazzling uniforms came quick succession. The Lord Chamberlain and his officials, bareheaded, their white wands of office, received the most distinguished persons and conducted them to a pavilion erected on the platform.

A whole station by that time rendered the scene at a levee. The Mander-in-Chief of the Forces, Marshal Earl Roberts, on a fine, spirited brown mare, carrying His Field Marshal's baton, at juncture trotted into the station and became the centre of interest. They were the State coaches used on the occasion of the Queen's jubilee, with beautiful mounted harnesses and traps. The horses were ridden by lillions in scarlet jackets, with a narrow band of crape on arms as a mark of the great. The carriages were closed.

The Illustrious Dead.

Following the carriages and preceded by an officer came an object at which every officer in the animated scene instinctively came to the left, and every head was bared. It was the little khaki-colored gun carriage which was to carry Queen Victoria's body from Victoria to Paddington Station. The eight Hanoverian cream-colored horses which the late Queen on the occasion of the jubilee were used to-day. The harnesses, the scarlet-coated lillions and the scarlet and gold red grooms who held each of the horses by the bridle were all the same. Only the little gun carriage was of the glittering glass and four four-horse carriages, conveying the Queen and Princesses.

The King of Belgium, Portugal and the Hellenes, probably riding, closing the escort.

In the procession were six carriages, the first and second carrying Queen Alexandra, the Duchess of Fife (now Princess Royal), Princess Victoria and Princess Charles of Denmark, and the daughters of Queen Victoria, and the King of the Belgians.

Soldiers representing the German army, non-commissioned officers and men, and the escort, brought up the rear.

Features of the Pageant.

The procession, apart from the gun-carriage bearing the coffin, and the Royal family and official mourners about it, was not noteworthy. Parliament, the Judiciary and the commercial bodies were not represented. Royalty, the army and the navy monopolized the pageant. Three thousand soldiers and sailors, picked companies representing all branches of the service—cavalry, artillery, infantry, yeomanry, militia, volunteers and colonials—formed the advance escort. They marched slowly and without music. Most of the uniforms were covered with dark overcoats, and the standards were draped with black, the officers wearing bands of crape on their sleeves. The infantry marched in columns of four with rifles reversed. They were half an hour in passing. Then came Field Marshal Earl Roberts and his staff, and after them four massed bands playing funeral marches. Three hundred musicians announced the coming of the body of the Queen. There was a long array of court officials under the leadership of the Duke of Norfolk (the Earl Marshal), all attired quaintly and brilliantly, bearing maces or wands. Most of them were elderly men, who for years had served the Queen.

Most of the spectators expected an imposing catafalque, and the coffin was almost past before they recognized its presence by removing their hats. It was concealed beneath a rich pall of white satin, on the corner of which gleamed the Royal arms. Across the pall the Royal standard was draped, and a large crown of gold encrusted with jewels rested at the head of the coffin, which was at the end of the gun carriage just over the gun. On the foot of the coffin were two smaller crowns with a gold jewelled sceptre lying between them.

The eight horses which drew the gun carriage were almost concealed beneath their rich harnesses. A large bow of purple attached to the coffin was the only symbol of mourning.

The Chief Mourner.

Immediately after three Royal mourners rode abreast. King Edward VII. was the central figure of the three, but no less ostentatious personage was seen in the procession. A black chapeau, with a plume of white feathers, was on his head, and a long black cloak was buttoned around him, and hung down over the big black horse which he was riding. The King's face seemed grave and care-worn. He looked straight ahead, apparently at the gun carriage. He gave no sign of seeing the long ranks of soldiers hedging back the populace about him, the windows crowded with black-bonneted women, the multitudes of uncovered heads, the purple draperies, and the green wreaths everywhere. He passed like a man alone.

Beside King Edward rode Emperor William, looking every inch a soldier. He glanced right and left as he rode and his hand frequently was raised to the red and white feathers hanging over his hat as he responded to salutes. Emperor William wore a black cloak over his new British Field Marshal's uniform, and the splendid white charger beneath him pranced up and down, causing His Majesty to display fine horsemanship.

On the King's left rode his brother, the Duke of Connaught, a man of soldierly appearance, almost un-

Ireland waited patiently for the arrival of the funeral procession. Their vigil was fully rewarded. Such an array of royalty, and such a mass of flaming colors was never before gathered within so small a space.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishop of York, the Bishop of Winchester and the Dean of Windsor officiated.

The services were remarkable for their grandeur and choral beauty.

The chapel choir, the Archbishop, the bishops and other clergy met the procession at the west door. From the organ loft, midway of the nave and the chancel, came the strains of Mendelssohn's march from "Songs Without Words," in E minor. The strains of the organ died away and the choir commenced singing softly the sentences of the dead. The solemn cortège proceeded up the nave, which was thronged with the highest and noblest women of England. "Lord Thou Hast Been Our Refuge," to Felton's setting, was next sung by the choir, which had not taken its place in the transept to the right of the altar.

The coffin rested upon a catafalque placed at the steps of the altar. The cross over the communion table was covered with white flowers, and the reredos behind was almost concealed with sprays of fern dotted with lilies.

Service at the Chapel.

The Bishop of Winchester read the lesson from the 15th Corinthians, "Man that is born of Woman," was chanted by the choir to Wesley's music, followed by "Thou knowest, Lord, the secrets of our hearts."

The Dean of Windsor read, "I heard a voice," and the choir sang the Lord's Prayer to the music composed especially for the dead Queen by Gounod. Once more the strains of the choir welled up through the ancient chapel with the singing of "How Blessed Are They That Died," by Tchaikowsky.

The Archbishop of Canterbury read the Collect and with quavering voice pronounced the benediction. There was a solemn pause while all heads bowed. A few sobs were heard and the choir then broke the oppressive stillness with the sweet harmony of the "Dresden Amen."

Then the loud tones of the Norroy King of Arms, William Henry Weldon, proclaimed the dead Monarch's title. The Spohr Anthem, "Blessed Are The Departed," followed and the service was concluded by the playing of Beethoven's funeral march by Sir Walter Parrott, organist of St. George's Chapel, and private organist of the late Queen.

Lord Rosebery Speaks of Our Late Queen's Gifts.

A despatch from London says:—Lord Rosebery presided on Wednesday morning at a special meeting of the Royal Scottish Corporation, called in London to pass resolutions expressing sorrow at the death of Queen Victoria, and of congratulation on the accession of King Edward VII. There was a crowded attendance.

Lord Rosebery, remarking that he would pass lightly over the congratulatory part of the programme, said his Majesty's speech at the Privy Council meeting sufficiently had indicated the laws by which he intended his reign should be governed, thus promising to make his rule no less illustrious than that of his parent.

Lord Rosebery then dwelt in eloquent terms on the life and death of Queen Victoria, saying that in the whole history of mankind no death

On the King's left rode his brother, the Duke of Connaught, a man of soldierly appearance, almost unnoticed and unrecognized by the people.

Two Hours in Passing.

The funeral procession occupied two hours in passing from Victoria Station to Paddington, a distance of three miles.

The decorations everywhere were impressive, but not elaborate. Purple draperies hung with green wreaths predominated. Flags were on most of the buildings.

The really impressive exhibition of mourning was the black clothing worn by principally all the people, which as streets, windows, stands and roofs everywhere were covered with spectators, gave the whole scene a sombre hue.

Lively Time at St. James' Park.

St. James' Park was packed with a crowd of about 20,000 people, who overran the flower beds, stood on the fences and swarmed in the trees, fought with policemen, smashed hats, and chased the programme vendors until the bells began tolling. Then the demeanor of the crowds changed, and while the procession was passing their attitude was one of the most impressive features of the day.

It was precisely 12.20 p.m. when the guards lining the platform of Paddington station came to a sharp "attention," and with solemn tread the head of the procession entered the building. For half an hour all was hushed save the clatter of horse hoofs and the rumble of the heavy gun carriage.

The pall was removed from the coffin and the casket was deposited in the saloon carriage, which the Queen had so often occupied during her lifetime.

King Edward, Queen Alexandra and the Duke of Connaught stood grouped together as the coffin was borne in, and then they all took seats, and the train started for Windsor.

AT WINDSOR.

The Funeral Service at St. George's Chapel Was One of the Most Marvelous Sights of the Ceremonies.

Windsor, Feb. 2.—By noon many notabilities in full uniform had arrived and the streets were jammed.

St. George's Chapel was a magnificent sight, and divided attention with the officials and College of Heralds, gorgeous in quaint mantles, tabards and insignia, and the medieval-looking Yeomen of the Guard carrying their halberds at slope.

Wild excitement was aroused in the crowd when the Beefeaters from the Tower of London arrived and entered the Castle. The officers in their gay court uniforms, the Life Guards with their flowing plumes galloped through the streets.

Woman Fell Dead.

One well-dressed woman fell down in the street and was picked up dead, the excitement having killed her.

The funeral service in St. George's Chapel was one of the most marvelous sights of the funeral ceremonies. It lasted from 3.20 to 4 p.m., but for three hours previous the leading men of Great Britain and Victoria, and of congratulation on the accession of King Edward VII. There was a crowded attendance.

Lord Rosebery, remarking that he would pass lightly over the congratulatory part of the programme, said His Majesty's speech at the Privy Council meeting sufficiently had indicated the laws by which he intended his reign should be governed, thus promising to make his rule no less illustrious than that of his parent.

Lord Rosebery then dwelt in eloquent terms on the life and death of Queen Victoria, saying that in the whole history of mankind no death had so touched such a large number of persons in the entire world. There was scarcely an intelligent individual in the civilized world but was deeply moved. He wondered if her subjects yet realized how much they had lost and what an enormous weight the Queen had in the councils of the world.

It was not brilliancy or genius which could supply the advantage she gave Great Britain by her fund of knowledge, which was unequalled by any constitutional historian. It was no disparagement of other kings to say she was the chief of the European sovereigns, and her influence in the councils of nations was always used for peace, freedom, and good government.

Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal (the Canadian High Commissioner) seconded the resolutions.

WEARING OF BLACK.

Period of Mourning Till 6th Day of March.

A despatch from Ottawa, says:—A cable has been received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, stating that court mourning for her late Majesty the Queen lasts until the 24th of January, 1902. The public will wear deep mourning until March 6th next, and half-mourning until April 17th.

In consequence of this intelligence there will be no reception at Government house until after Jan. 24th, 1902. An extra of the Canada Gazette was issued this afternoon containing the above information, and the Governor-General invites all persons to join in general mourning.

DE WET MOVING SOUTH.

He Crossed Bloemfontein Line Wednesday Night.

A despatch from London, Friday, says:—General Kitchener's characteristically curt admission that General De Wet has eluded General Bruce Hamilton increases the fears that the Boer leader has entered, or is about to enter, the Cape Colony. A telegram from Cape Town says that unofficial corroboration of yesterday's report that he is now in the colony has been received, and estimates his force at 1,500 men, with two guns.

The news is regarded here as discouraging, if no worse. "It is not a pleasant opening to the seventeenth month of the war," says the Morning Post, while other papers which persist in optimism, betray a certain uneasiness.

DAIRY MARKETS.

Butter—Prices and conditions are unchanged. Quotations are as follows:—Dairy, tubs and pails, choice, 17 1-2 to 18 1-2c; medium, 16 to 17 1-2c; poor, 18 to 15c; dairy prints, choice, 18 1-2 to 19 1-2c; large rolls, good to choice, 17 to 18c; creameries, boxes, 21 to 22c; and pounds, 22 to 23c.

Cheese—Full cream, July and August milk, sells at 10 1-2 to 11c.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

Toronto, Feb. 5.—At the western cattle yards to-day we had a total of 50 carloads of live stock, including 300 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 350 hogs, and 30 calves.

We had an over-supply of inferior cattle; business was brisk for choice stuff, but prices were weaker and trade slow for all inferior cattle, either butcher or export stuff.

Most of the export cattle here sold at from 4 to 4 3-4c, with a few lots of prime stuff at 5c; there was a fair trade, but too much cattle of only second-rate quality.

THE GEM OF THE MORNING.

Dr. Talmage Discourses Upon the Silver Point in the Heavens.

A despatch from Washington says:—Rev. Dr. Talmage preached from the following text; "I am the bright and the morning star."—Rev. xxii. 16.

It seems as if the natural world was anxious to make up for the damage it did our race in furnishing the forbidden fruit. If that fruit wrought death among the nations, now all the natural products shall become a symbol of blessing. The showering down of the wealth of the orchard will make us think of him who Solomon describes as the apple-tree among the trees of the wood, and the flowers of tangled glen and cultured parterre shall be the dew-glittering garland for the brow of the Lord Jesus. Yea, even the night shall be taxed, and its brightest star shall be set as a gem in the coronet of our holy religion.

The meaning of my text is this; as the morning star precedes and promises the coming of the day, so Christ heralds the natural and spiritual dawn.

In the first place, Christ heralded the coming of the creation. There was a time when there was no order, no sound, no beauty. No wing stirred. No word was uttered. No light sped. As far as God could look up, as far down, as far out, there was nothing. Immeasurable solitude. Height and depth, and length and breadth of nothingness. Did Christ then exist? Oh, yes; "By him were all things made that are made; things in heaven and things in earth, and things under the earth." Yes, he antedated the creation. He led forth Arcturus and his sons. He shone before the first morning. His voice was heard in the concert when the morning stars serenaded the advent of our infant earth, when, wrapped in swaddling clothes of light, it lay in his arms of the great Jehovah. He saw the first foundation laid. He saw the first light kindled. The hand which was afterwards crushed upon the cross, was thrust into chaos and it brought out one world and swung it in that orbit, and brought out another world and swung it in another orbit, and brought out all the worlds and swung them in their particular orbits. They came like sheep at the call of a shepherd. They knew his voice and he called them all by their names.

Again, Christ heralds the dawn of comfort in a Christian soul. Sometimes we come to passes in life where all kinds of tribulation meet us. You are building up some great enterprise. You have built the foundation, the wall—you are just about to put on the capstone, when everything is demolished. You have a harp all strung for sweetest accord and some great agony crushes it. There is a little voice hushed in the household; blue eyes closed; color dashed out of the cheeks; the foot still; instead of the

She shall have her schools and her colleges and her churches; her vast population shall surrender themselves to Christ. What is that light I see breaking over the Alps? The morning! All India shall come to God. Her idols shall be cast down. Her Juggernauts shall be broken. Her temples of iniquity shall be demolished. What is that light I see breaking over the top of Himalayas? The morning. The emporphed clouds shall guard the path of the conquering day.

Again: Christ heralds the dawn of heaven upon every Christian's dying pillow. As one of these brothers told me last night of his mother in the last moment, she looked up, and said, pointing to some supernatural being that seemed to be in the room: "Look at that bright form. Why, they have come for me now." The lattice is turned so that the light is very pleasant. It is peace all around. You ask yourself: "Why, can this be a dying room? It is so different from anything I have ever expected." Perhaps it is four o'clock in the morning, and you have the bed wheeled around to the window, and the dying one looks out into the night sky, and she sees something that attracts her attention, and you wonder what it is. Why, it is a star. It is a star that out of its silver rim is pouring a supernatural light into that dying experience. And you say; "What is that you are looking at?" she says; "It is a star." You say; "What star is that that seems so well to please you?" "Oh! she says, "that is the morning star—Jesus!" I would like to have my deathbed under that evangelistic star. I would like to have my eye on that star so I could be assured of the morning. Then the dash of the surf of the sea of death would only be the billowing up of the promise; "When thou passeth through the waters, I will be with thee, and the rivers they shall not overflow thee!"

Paul kept his eye on that morning star, until he could say, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Edward Payson kept his eye on that star until he could say; "The breezes of heaven fan me." Dr. Goodwin kept his eye on that evangelistic star until he could say, "I am swallowed up in God." John Tenant kept his eye on that evangelistic star until he could say; "Welcome, sweet Lord Jesus—welcome eternity."

No other star ever pointed a mariner into so safe a harbor. No other star ever sunk its silvered anchor so deep into the waters. No other star ever pierced such accumulated cloud, or beckoned with such holy luster. I would God that if my sermon to-night does not lead you to Christ, that before morning, looking out of the windows, the foot still; instead of the

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, FEB. 10.

"Parable of the Talents." Matt. 25. 14-30.
Gilded Text. Rom. 14. 12.

PRACTICAL NOTES.

Verse 14. The words the kingdom of heaven are supplied by the translators. The Revised Version approaches the original more closely: For it is as when a man, going into another country, etc. His absence would make it necessary to leave his affairs in the hands of others. So we are, "in Christ's stead"—managing his affairs on earth because he has gone to heaven. The word for servants means bond servants, slaves; which reminds us of how Paul used to sign his name—"Paul, a bond servant of Jesus Christ." We also are his servants. Delivered unto them his goods. To be invested; intrusted to them his negotiable wealth, which was in the form of money—of talents. So "all that Christ has of gift or opportunity he bestows on his servants."

15. Talents were originally measures of weight in gold and silver. Afterward the word was used of coins. We know that the value of talents varied in different countries, and ancient authorities are not in agreement with each other, nor always with themselves; a gold talent was in weight twice that of silver; besides which silver and gold varied of course, in their intrinsic value. So that it becomes as difficult as it is unnecessary to the meaning of the story to accurately estimate the wealth left to these servants. But it is safe to assume that each of these talents equaled a sum between one thousand and two thousand dollars. Our talents are all our powers and opportunities—moments of time, coins of money, organs of body, individualities of taste and temperament, aptitudes, friendships, religious privileges, even limitations. Five talents and two and one indicate the whole difference between men in capacities and opportunities. Ability means aptitude, "faculty." God gives to every person opportunities proportioned to his moral ability. Straightway is in the Revised Version omitted from this verse to appear at the beginning of verse 16.

16. The rich man went on his journey at his own convenience, but straightway when he had gone the bond servant who had received the largest proceeded to invest it in merchandise. This teaches the "cardinal virtue" of promptitude, alike in secular and sacred affairs. Traded. "Worked," "engaged in business." Made them other five talents. Enormous profits were within the reach of ancient tradesmen, because standards of value were not then so nearly fixed as they are with us; and as a consequence enormous risks were run. There is no risk, however, in efforts to increase one's spiritual capital.

17. Likewise he that had received two. He did quite as well as the man who had received five; but it does not follow that the master had made a mistake when trying to apportion to each man "according to his ability," for, as daily experience shows, some men can conduct a small business suc-

the proportion of the reward heavenly kingdom has any relation to the amount of talents intrusted soul.

We turn in verse 24 to the next part of the lesson.

24. Thou art a hard man, grasping, unfeeling man. This was seen to be true, for all vicars and employers and executors are regarded as unfeeling by law and jealous people. This was jealous, and thought he had been properly appreciated. Where thou hast not sown, and reaped where thou hast not sown, as the Revised Version "where thou didst not scatter a sense this of necessity is to all slaveholders.

25. I was afraid, and went thy talent in the earth; lo, thou hast that is thine. So this unfeeling servant was truthful as honest. Timidity may have been a chief ingredient of his uselessness, may have shrunk from incurable risks of trade. Timidity develops into a vice. Faith and hope are two of the three cardinal of Christianity.

26. Wicked and slothful is this he had certainly been, failing to all the law and moral of the times he owed his best efforts to his master. Thou knewest This is not an acknowledgment of personal wrongdoing, nor had I want made any accusation him except of hardness.

27. Thou oughtest therefore put my money to the exchequer. There is a touch of kindness in this. If this servant was so timid as to dare not trade for himself as other servants had done, there was a way by which he could have a profitable disposition of the silver; for there were then a now in the East, as in our own country, investors, bankers, who have taken the money, have given security, and allowed a good interest upon it. Usury means "interest."

28. Take therefore the talents him, and give it unto him which have ten talents. The lesson of this is that he who neglects opportunities for doing good to them, and he who embraces opportunities receives more. Those who had five talents had the greatest risks and temptations before his increased opportunities be great. But there is no comparison here of the man of the five with the man of the two talents.

29. Here is the law which has been exemplified in the lord's dealing with the servants. Everyone makes use of what he has share everyone that neglects what shall lose it. This is a great portion of human life. It is true of all and mind and soul, of money, friends, of moral character and social privileges.

30. Cast ye the unprofitable into outer darkness. While the mates were received into the splendor of their master's home, the unfaithful one, was cast out in the black and lonely. All of them were released from bondage; two were made general the social equal and personal knew his voice and he called them all by their names.

Again Christ heralds the dawn of comfort in a Christian soul. Sometimes we come to passes in life where all kinds of tribulation meet us. You are building up some great enterprise. You have built the foundation, the wall—you are just about to put on the capstone, when everything is demolished. You have a harp all strung for sweetest accord and some great agony crushes it. There is a little voice hushed in the household; blue eyes closed; color dashed out of the cheeks; the foot still; instead of the quick feet in the hall, the heavy tread of those who march to the grave. Oh, what are people to do amid all these sorrows? Some sit down and mourn. Some bite their lips until the blood comes. Some swing their pale hands, some fall on their faces. Some lie on their backs helpless and look up into what seems to them an unpitying heaven. Some pull their hair down over their eyes, and look through with a fiend's glare. Some with both hands press their hot brain and want to die, and cry: "O God! O God!" Long night, bitter night, stupendous night of the world's suffering. Some know not which way to turn. But not so, the Christian man. He looks up toward the heavens. He sees a bright appearance there. Can it be only a flashing meteor? Can it be only a falling star? Can it be only a delusion? Nay, nay. The longer he looks the more distinct it becomes, until after awhile he cries out. "A star! a morning star! a star of comfort! a star of grace! a star of peace! The star of the Redeemer!" Peace for all trouble; balm for all wounds; life for all dead. Now, Jesus, the great heart-healer comes into our homes. Peace! Peace that passeth all understanding. We look up through our tears. We are comforted. It is the morning star of the Redeemer. "Who broke off that flower?" said one servant in the garden to another, and the other servant said, "The master." Nothing more was said, for if the master had not a right to break off the flower to wear over his heart, or to set in the vase in the mansion, who has a right? And when Christ comes down into our garden to gather lilies, shall we fight him back? shall we talk as though he had no right to come? If any one in all the universe has a right to that which is beautiful in our homes, then our Master has, and he will take it and he will wear it over his heart, or he will set it in the vase of his palace eternal. "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Peace, troubled soul. I put the balm on your wounded heart to-night. The morning star—the morning star of the Redeemer.

Again Christ heralds the dawn of millennial glory. It is night in China, it is night in India, night in Liberia, night for the vast majority of the world's population. But it seems to me there are some intimations of the morning. All Spain has to be brought under the influence of the gospel, and before long she shall have a republic of the right kind, a Christian Republic. What is that light I see breaking over the top of the Pyrenees? The morning. Yea, all Italy shall receive the gospel.

kept his eye on that evangelistic star until he could say, "I am swallowed up in God." John Tenant kept his eye on that evangelistic star until he could say, "Welcome, sweet Lord Jesus—welcome eternity." No other star ever pointed mariner into so safe a harbor. No other star ever sunk its silvered anchor so deep into the waters. No other star ever pierced such accumulated cloud, or beckoned with such a holy luster. I would God that if my sermon to-night does not lead you to Christ, that before morning, looking out of the window, the astronomy of the night heavens might lead you to the feet of Jesus.

HUSBANDS AND FIANCES.

The difference between the masculine disposition before and after marriage was illustrated the other day in one of our large shops, where two of the lords of creation waited for dilatory women with whom they had appointments.

Both had chosen a point of vantage at the silk counter, where they could see every one who entered, and from 11.55 to 12.10 after Mr. Married Man—every onlooker knew he was married by his impatience—looked at his watch on an average of twice a minute and gnawed his mustache continuously and so savagely that the sales-women in his immediate vicinity edged away and watched events curiously.

At ten minutes after the noon hour the situation was relieved by the appearance on the scene of a pretty little woman, a flushed and hurried little woman, who eyed her liege lord askance as she approached.

"I'm sorry I'm a few minutes late, Jack," she said, "but that dreadful tailor wouldn't let me go until he'd basted the last seam to his satisfaction."

"I'm sorry also," responded her companion, coldly, "for your tardiness will necessitate my going without my luncheon. This is the last appointment I'll ever make with you," and away they went together milady looking injured and milord majestically offended though he came to think of it, fifteen minutes isn't such a great space of time after all.

The other man was not married. That was evident from his patience and the beaming glance with which he received the winsome bit of femininity for which he waited, though she was a full half hour behind time. Perhaps when the words have been said over his head that give him an inalienable right to find fault he will not be so amiable, but he was now.

"Am I late?" asked the young woman, with a fine disregard for the evidence of the clock right in front of her eyes.

"O, a trifle," replied her cavalier, disingenuously; "but it doesn't make a particle of difference. I've been very much amused at the crowd."

Of course he hadn't been at all. He'd been striding up and down, looking and feeling as out of place as a bull in a china shop, but he wouldn't have said so for worlds.

All of which illustrates the fact that marriage is a sort of furnace, in which is transmuted bearishness and that appalling plainness of speech that leads to the courts sometimes. But why this should be so no prophet has yet arisen in Israel to explain.

other five talents. Enormous profits were within the reach of ancient tradesmen, because standards of value were not then so nearly fixed as they are with us; and as a consequence enormous risks were run. There is no risk, however, in efforts to increase one's spiritual capital.

17. Likewise he that had received two. He did quite as well as the man who had received five; but it does not follow that the master had made a mistake when trying to apportion to each man "according to his ability," for as daily experience shows, some men can conduct a small business successfully who could not with equal success conduct a larger one.

18. He that received one went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money. If this action seems to us little short of idiocy, it is because ancient oriental customs differed so widely from our own. It was lazy, and cowardly; he shows himself to be good for nothing as a tradesman, and a man not fit to be intrusted with wealth; nevertheless, having perversely decided to keep away from the ventures of trade, he took the wisest course left when he put the money into the only safe-deposit vault the ancient East knew—a hole in the ground. The man at least was not dishonest. He was no prodigal. He simply refrained from using his talent, and like many so-called Christians, lived in his own small world regardless of others.

The first five verses complete the story of the distribution of the talents. We now turn to a consideration of the reward given to fidelity.

19. The lord of those servants cometh. Reference is here doubtless made to our Lord's second coming, but none of the various "comings" of Christ to human souls are to be excluded. Reckoned with them. So we must all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

20. This verse depicts a scene which should be made vivid to the scholars' imaginations. The honest pride shown in the report is admirable.

21. Good and faithful. A wonderful commendation; capable and worthy of praise, more than that, loyal and full of friendship. A few things. The responsibility of six or seven thousand dollars would not be regarded as "few things" by many of our scholars, but to this rich man it was a trifle. He now shows himself to be not merely a trader in spirit, but a moral educator; all this investment has been for the purpose of bringing out the character and abilities of his slaves. I will make thee ruler over many things. Responsibility well discharged leads to greater responsibility even in this life, and those who are faithful Christians in this world, ruling their own spirits, and leading other souls to God, are to be kings and priests in the heavenly world. Enter thou into the joy of thy lord. "Welcome into the luxuries of my home; I no longer regard you as a servant or slave, but as a companion and personal friend."

22, 23. He also that had received two talents had been as successful, and was as highly rewarded as he that had received the five. The words of the lord are the same as those in verse 21, and there is no intimation here that everyone that neglects what he shall lose it. This is a great principle of human life. It is true of the mind and soul, of money friends, of moral character and spiritual privileges.

30. Cast ye the unprofitable ser into outer darkness. While his mates were received into the joy splendor of their master's luxur home, the unfaithful one was cast out in the black and lonely astr All of them were released from bondage; two were made gentle, the social equal and personal friends of their former master; one, might have had this privilege, is pily turned out with the tramps, that at night, too. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. There often is in an Eastern city side of a banquet hall. turn in verse 24 to the punishment of neglect.

Thou art a hard man. A ping, unfeeling man. This may seemed true, for all vigorous and employers and executives regarded as unfeeling by lazy people and jealous people. This servant jealous, and thought he had not properly appreciated. Reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strewed, is the Revised Version has it, "Re thou didst not scatter." In use of necessity is true of slaveholders.

I was afraid, and went and hid talent in the earth; lo, there thou that is thine. So this unprofitable servant was truthful as well as st. Timidity may have been a ingredient of his uselessness. He have shrunk from incurring the of trade. Timidity easily de-s into a vice. Faith and hope two of the three cardinal virtues Christianity.

Wicked and slothful servant, he had certainly been, for according to all the law and moral feelings times he owed his best energies is master. Thou knewest, etc. is not an acknowledgment of any mal wrongdoing, nor had the ser-made any accusation -against except of hardness.

Thou oughtest therefore to have my money to the exchangers. e is a touch of kindness in this. is servant was so timid that he d not trade for himself as the oth-eravants had done, there was one by which he could have made fitable disposition of the gold or r; for there were then and are in the East, as in our own coun-investors, bankers, who would taken the money, have given good rity, and allowed a good interest it. Usury means "interest."

Take therefore the talent from and give it unto him which hath talents. The lesson of this verse iat he who neglects to use op-unities for doing good forfeits i, and he who embraces such op-unities receives more. The man had five talents had had the test risks and temptations, there-his increased opportunities shall reat. But there is no comparison of the man of the five talents the man of the two talents.

Here is the law which had just exemplified in the lord's dealings the servants. Everyone that es use of what he has shall gain, yone that neglects what he has lose it. This is a great principle man life. It is true of the body mind and soul, of money and ds, of moral character and spirit-privileges.

CAUGHT THE ROBBER

THE OFFICIALS HUNTED FOR HIM IN BRASS BAND FASHION.

One Instance In Which This Style of Detective-Work Succeeded Admirably—How the Culprit Was Forced Into a Confession.

How do detectives detect? It all depends. There is no rule. That which solves one mystery today will make another more impenetrable tomorrow. According to one of the most noted detectives of this country, the rule of common sense is the best to follow.

Take a case narrated by this detective. He was called up on a long distance telephone, which in itself is not in accordance with the general idea of telling a detective of a crime. The message said that a farmer had been robbed of $8,000 in gold and asked that an operative be sent to the town near the farm. The message was received at night. The following morning a man from the agency went to the office from which the message was sent and announced his business just as a commercial traveler would announce his. Nothing in his appearance indicated that he was a man of mystery.

The man who sent the message said to him: "A farmer," mentioning his name and describing the way to the farmer's house, "had $8,000 in gold. He kept it in a box under his bed. One day while he was at work on his farm the money was stolen. That's all there is to the case."

The detective hired a horse and rode to the farm. He saw the farmer, but the farmer could tell him no more than the man in town who sent the message to the city. The detective remained in the neighborhood several days, visiting other farmers. To each of them he said: "I am a detective. I am looking for the man who stole your neighbor's money." Not one of the farmers had a suspicion of the identity of the thief. The detective learned the standing of each farmer upon whom he called. Then he returned to the home office.

About a week later another man went to the same neighborhood and told his business. He was a detective from the same agency and on the same business as the first. He went to each farmer and told his business. Then he went away. The farmers talked about his visit to one another.

At the end of the third week another detective went into the community. Although he was disguised as a lightning rod peddler, he told each farmer he saw, confidentially, that he was a detective looking for the man who had stolen $8,000 in gold. His reputation preceded him. Wherever he went farmers said, "You may be a lightning rod peddler all right, but you are a detective." And invariably he replied, "I am a detective," and all the farmers in the community talked among themselves about the lightning rod peddler detective who was in the country. This detective suddenly disappeared.

Four weeks later another visitor came into the community. He had no business except that which he proclaimed as he traveled. He met men in the road and said, after passing the time of day: "I am a detective. I am here trying to find out who stole Farmer —'s $8,000 in gold." The news traveled. It was a new way of hunting a criminal. There was no mysterious man in disguise, but "a real, everyday man in the neighborhood who said he was a detective." "Have you seen the detective?" was as common a question as the salutation of the day.

To make his work all the more open this detective said to the farmer who lost the money: "You will soon have all your gold back. There won't be a dollar of it missing. The man who stole it lives in the neighborhood. He will confess the theft."

"Won't he run away before he will give it up?" asked the farmer.

The detective replied: "No. The man who runs away will thereby say to this community that he is the thief. No one in this community will dare move away."

FEEDING AND REARING CALVES.

The dairy cow should never suckle her calf for more than three days. Some advocate taking the calf away as soon as dropped. According to Prof. A. M. Soule, the calf should first be mothered before it is taken from the dam. This clears the skin of effete matter and materially aids the circulation. It is very important that this be done, as the calf is in a weakened condition and this aids in the development of its strength. After it is done, the calf may be removed without suffering. In all instances, it should receive the first milk or colostrum. This contains properties that are purgative in nature and clears the alimentary canal of materials that otherwise might cause congestion of the various digestive organs. Those who have handled calves have been astonished by the rapid growth and strength displayed by young animals, several days after birth. The colostrum milk is the best means of providing the animal with the requisite food for growth and development. This matter must, therefore, receive due consideration when weaning calves and raising them by hand.

Should scours and other intestinal troubles result from careless feeding they can be remedied by the addition of lime water, and by feeding in such a manner that the animal will have to take the milk slowly so that it will become thoroughly mixed with the saliva and other digestive juices and properly assimilated. After the third day, take the calf away and feed for two weeks or so on whole milk, then on skimmilk, and adjuncts, chiefly flaxseed gruel. The milk must be fed at blood heat, between 98 and 100 degrees Fahr.

The calf should early be taught to eat a mixture of grain and fodder. In the dairy the object is a rapid growth of muscle, but not fat. No difficulty will be experienced in teaching the calf to drink if a nipple is used. Equally good calves can be grown on skimmilk, and at much less expense when properly managed. The calves should be handled constantly from the beginning to make them gentle. Handle the under parts in the heifer and thus stimulate the flow of blood to those parts, directly increasing the activity of the glands and developing the milk producing organs to the fullest extent. Breed at about 18 to 20 months, so that the calf may be dropped at from 27 to 29 months.

Breeding too young is detrimental to the mother, for she cannot develop properly and support a foetus at the same time, and a stunted heifer will make a cow deficient in stamina.

It has no soil, gets no rain of consequence is without a blade of grass or green shrub—merely a waste of high rocky peaks and low sandy plains upon which the tropical sun beats down with an intensity that makes life a burden to any except the sleeping native.

This unagricultural community can boast a style in pig sties that probably has no parallel elsewhere in the world. Above the town rises a huge hill of solid rock, the slope at the back of which is very moderate. This volcanic stone is soft enough to be dug into without use of explosives, and over an area of about two acres hundreds of circular holes, some four feet in diameter and the same in depth, have been excavated. This is the common piggery for the town, each well having a solitary occupant. Each pen has a small stone trough in which are placed water and the scanty scraps from the owner's table that comprise the sole feed of the pig. In these pens, without drainage, without shade in the heat of the day, and without water, except the scant drinking allowance, the animals pass their whole existence, not a solitary specimen being in evidence in the streets of the town. They are small, thin, miserable specimens of animal life, black and white in color. But they furnish the natives with the only fresh animal flesh they have.

DISHES FOR THE INVALID.

We give below a novel method of employing valuable portions of fowls usually discarded as of no evident use;

Comparatively few housekeepers appreciate the amount of nutriment that is wasted with every pair of chicken's or fowl's feet that is thrown away. A practical test of the value of these usually despised portions is to boil one pair in a saucepan by themselves until the bones fall apart, and then note the quantity of jelly thus obtained. The feet are the most easily cleansed of any portion of the bird, because the thick outer skin can be removed entire, like a stocking. To do this the feet should not be allowed to boil, as the skin will adhere to the bones, but they should be plunged into hot water, not boiling, and allowed to stand for two or three minutes. The skin will then readily loosen at the top and draw off to the claws. The latter should be cut off.

Chicken Jelly—To make chicken jelly, clean and disjoint a chicken, cut it into small pieces, break the bones and place it with the feet, prepared as described above, in a saucepan. Add one pint of cold water for every pound of chicken. Heat slowly, simmer until the meat falls from the bones. Strain, let it stand until cold, remove the fat and season it with salt, pepper and a small piece of lemon peel. Parsley, celery and bay leaves may be used for flavoring if they are desired. Turn into a mold and stand in a cold place to harden. This can be used for broth or soup by thinning slightly with boiling water.

Chicken Soup—To make chicken soup, follow the above directions. Remove the meat when it has fallen from the bones, strain, add a tablespoonful of rice, a small piece of onion, the seasoning, bits of the meat and cook until the rice is done. Remove the onion, and serve with corn-sopps, sippets or toast.

THE NEWS TRAVELED. It was a way of hunting a criminal. There was no mysterious man in disguise, but "a real, everyday man in the neighborhood who said he was a detective." "Have you seen the detective?" was as common a question as the salutation of the day.

To make his work all the more open this detective said to the farmer who lost the money: "You will soon have all your gold back. There won't be a dollar of it missing. The man who stole it lives in the neighborhood. He will confess the theft."

"Won't he run away before he will give it up?" asked the farmer.

In the words of the chief who tells the story, "Every man in the community at once felt that somehow or other he was being watched. The tension became painful, in spite of the fact that only one man in the community was guilty."

Thirty-three days after the robbery a farmer went to town and asked that a detective be sent for. When the detective came, which was the next day, the farmer said to him: "Come with me and I will show you where the $8,000 is buried. I am the thief." The two men went to the woods. The snow was ankle deep on the spot where the treasure was buried. After clearing away the drift the detective dug down and found an old coffeepot containing the gold. He took it to the farmer who had lost his gold, and the farmer identified it. The detective took his prisoner back to the city, and in less than a week the man was in state prison.

"It was a common sense rule," said the head of the agency. "Each one of the men I sent up to the community learned that there was only one man in the community who was in the habit of drinking. He had been for years addicted to periodical drunks. All of the sudden this man stopped drinking. My men tried to get him to taste liquor, but he refused. This was our only suspicion that he might be guilty. Then I conceived the plan of having it bruited every day that there was a detective in the community. From the time I got the message until the confession there was hardly a day in which that community was not stirred up by the news that one of my detectives was in the settlement looking for the thief, and I always instructed my men to assert that the guilty man lived in the community.

"Thus the talk became the topic of the day, on the roads, in the farmhouse, on the farms. Not for an instant did I allow anybody to forget it. After the arrest of the farmer I asked him what made him confess. He said he never could hear any other subject discussed. Every time he met one of his neighbors that neighbor would ask him if he had seen the detective. He thought once of going away, but just then he heard what my man had said, that the guilty one would try to go, and that fact deterred him. It made him afraid. Every stranger he met in the road was a detective. Every knock at his door was that of a detective. He could stand it no longer. The burden was greater than he could bear, and he confessed. Rather paradoxical, was it not, that his reformation as to drinking should have made suspicion against him all the stronger? The man explained that."

LOCATION OF FARM BUILDINGS.

When stables run east and west and the animals are arranged in two rows facing a central passageway, those animals upon the south side get the benefits of all the sunlight, while those upon the north side get none at all. In combination barns used for storage and stable, where the cattle are kept under the scaffolds, it is better to give them the southern exposure rather than the northern, for the objections to the wide range of temperature do not offset the stimulating effect derived from direct sunlight upon the animals or the disinfecting action it has in the stable. In the storage of excrement about stables every precaution should be taken to guard against contamination of the air of the stable or the air introduced into it to take the place of the foul air removed.

To secure effective ventilation in any building, two sets of openings are necessary, namely, inlets for the admission of pure air and outlets for the removal of impure air. When the artificial system is employed, especially where heated air is the motive force, the inlets should be located in the walls near the ceilings, the outlets in the floor on the same side of the room as the inlet. In natural ventilation, where cold air is brought in, the inlets should be in the walls near the floor line, the outlets in the ceilings, roofs, or walls above.

The inlet and outlet most commonly met with is the shaft or duct. In its construction there are certain general rules that should always be observed. A round shaft is preferable to a square one, as it has greater carrying capacity, there being no dead corners. A smooth one is better than one that is rough, the velocity of the current, all other conditions the same, being greater in the former than the latter. To insure action a duct should be as short and straight as it is possible to have it. Those of too great length are usually useless unless artificial heat be used in them to create a circulation of air. Those placed on the south side of a building, where they are exposed to the heat of the sun, are more efficient than those placed on the north side. The introduction of angles should be avoided as much as possible. Each right angle put in reduces the velocity of the current one-half. When it becomes necessary, as it frequently is, to change the direction, a rounded elbow may be used to good advantage, it being claimed that it will not lessen the velocity as much, there being no square angle for the air to strike against.

SIX HOURS AFLOAT.

A London paper relates the trying experience of an English sailor. He could not swim, and was six hours in the water during a storm. He had a life-preserver, but was in constant terror lest it should slip from his grasp. If it did he knew he could never regain it. He had fallen off the bow-chains of the vessel, and from midnight to daylight the life-boat was searching for him while the ship lay to. Many captains would have desisted in an hour or two, but this one persevered. The men were finally rewarded with a sight of their comrade a mile away. A day's rest restored his strength, and he resumed his dangerous duties.

First Beautiful Snow Poem.

You print many poems from people, and I thought you would like some of mine. I think they are better than many you have printed in your paper. This one is about beautiful snow which has just fallen. If you like this, I can send some more. I have written lots about birds and our river and nature. I like them best because they come from the heart.

BEAUTIFUL SNOW.

The snow has fallen white and nice;
It covers everything;
It covers field and barn and fence;
Also the birds that sing.

And now we have the time for sleighs,
The boys and girls will meet
And travel fastly o'er the snow
Upon the roads and street.

Cheer up, cheer up, unhappy youth
And see the snow a-falling.
Come, let us slide along the road,
For you'll loud is calling.

The horses are a-prancing round,
And they must well be shod
To keep upon the icy road
As slowly home they plod.

If you can't use this poem, send it back, but I think your readers will like it. Yours,

NEW LEADER TO BE SELECTED

A movement is on foot among the Conservative party in Ontario which may be taken a change of masters. Some people may distrust it on the principle that it's better to bear the ills they have than to fly to others they know not of. At any rate, the movement indicates that the Conservative party is dissatisfied with itself, and chafes at the old leaders, who have ridden everywhere for a fall. The men who are thrust forward by the new shuffle are W. F. Maclean, M.P., and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, whose political ambitions so far have been equalled only by his disappointments. With these two gentlemen in the foreground it is not unreasonable to suspect that Clarke Wallace lurks somewhere behind the scenes. Dr. Nesbitt has been known for a long time as Mr. Wallace's aide-de-camp, and Mr. Maclean has on one or two occasions used the knife for him, notably when Mr. E. F. Clarke was defeated for Mayor of Toronto because he didn't suit Mr. Wallace's book. Of course it is pure speculation, but it's worth while observing that Mr. Wallace's prospects at Ottawa are closed. He can never hope to be leader of the Conservative party in the Federal House, and his eyes may well turn wistfully to the Provincial arena, where he imagines a fair chance of being Caesar. Mr. Wallace can never be acceptable to Quebec. He has no career as a unifier in front of him. He must follow his bent, which is to be sectional and extremist. The new movement may mean, therefore, that Mr. Wallace is to transfer his activities, and that the next Provincial election will again see the Protestant horse galloping through the land. This horse is a bad steeplechaser. It has always thrown its riders, as Sir Wm. Ralph Meredith might testify if he were consulted. However, it is not the cue of the new movement to consult anybody. Mr. Whitney, we are told, endorsed the new constitution, and so did the party organizers when it was submitted to them. But the rub lies in this—they were not consulted until the constitution was made and the movement fairly launched. In fact, they were held up, and with the pistol under their noses they threw up their hands.

It is just a question whether the Conservative party in this Province will be content with the new management. The protagonists are really a clique of the old coterie, and their records are behind them. They may claim that they have been kept under while Sir Charles Tupper was on the roof, and that they are brimming with reforms and evangelists, but will the party take them at their word? Both Mr. Maclean and Dr. Nesbitt have pasts—pasts that are tied up with bossism of the most palpable type. There was E. F. Clarke, for instance, who has already been mentioned, and there was John Shaw, about a month ago, who was a victim of the same influences. Toronto bears the burden of these two white men because Toronto—well, because Toronto is Toronto and follows the bell-wether.

With the Province it is a different matter. The country electors are swayed more by principles and by business and moral considerations than by little urban cabals and juntas trying to imitate the methods of Richard Croker. The new movement has a specious outside, but at the core of it hides a tyranny more overwhelming than the one that is discarded.

Theoretically the moment always brings forward the man. In practice this does not always happen. The Liberal party in England is as badly shattered as the Conservative party in Canada. They cannot unite on a leader, although in Lord Rosebery they have at least one statesman of the first rank. Will the Conservative party in Ontario regard Mr. Wallace and his associates as the men of the moment? Are they big enough for the job? Will their policy make toward sweetness and light, or toward bitterness and confusion? Or, will they continue to trust to the quiet mediocrity of Mr. Whitney, garnering strength meanwhile and giving a new leader time to develop?

It must not be thought that the new movement "to get in touch with the rank and file" was spontaneous. It was engineered from Toronto, and very little is to be expected from it. The new bosses, as self-appointed as the old ones, propose to utilize the old

The Worm's Story of How He Finally Came to Turn.

"Hello, old man! What have you in all those bundles?" asked a gay, airy young bachelor of a careworn, solemn looking young man as they met in a suburban railway train.

"Presents for my wife," was the sententious reply. "It's her birthday."

"Well, what are you bringing your wife in that package from your tailor's?" gayly pursued the bachelor.

"Trousers," was the answer.

"What?"

"Yes, I repeat—trousers. Just you listen. On my birthday my wife got me three or four beautiful lace handkerchiefs, such as women carry at afternoon teas and such places, and a black velvet hat with high feathers, one of the three story kind that obstruct your view of the stage in the theater. They looked mighty well on her, and she asked me if I wasn't having a nice birthday."

"Well, I didn't mind that very much, but when Christmas came I got another deal of the same sort. I gave my wife a pretty gold ring. She gave me a turquoise ring too small to go over any of my knuckles, and she wears it now next to the one I gave her. But that wasn't the worst of it. She got her sister to give me some after dinner coffee cups and my sister to make me a lot of lace doilies. That was all I got for Christmas."

the conservative party is dissatisfied with itself, and chafes at the old leaders, who have ridden everywhere for a fall. The men who are thrust forward by the new shuffle are W. F. It must not be thought that the new movement "to get in touch with the rank and file" was spontaneous. It was engineered from Toronto, and very little is to be expected from it. The new bosses, as self-appointed as the old ones, propose to utilize the old party organizers and the old party machinery, and to dragoon the mutineers into line. In fact, Mr. Maclean and Dr. Nesbitt are trying to repeat in the larger area of Ontario what they recently succeeded in doing in Toronto. Mr. Shaw Wood, who called the conference, probably thinks the idea was his own. He may imagine himself the redeemer, but if he will cast his mind back a little he will decide that the notion was inspired rather than an inspiration. Mr. Wood deserves credit for his good intentions; but when all's said and done Mr. Wood is merely an instrument in the hands of some very sophisticated politicians.

A Clever Canary.

A lady who had lost a canary happened to be attracted by a bird that was hopping about in its cage in the front window of a house in New York. Thinking that it looked very like her own, she knocked at the house door and asked a few questions about it. She was told that it had been found one cold morning sitting on the window sill and was taken in and cared for. The lady said her bird could perform the pretty feat of picking up a pin and sticking it in the carpet. Being allowed to test this bird, the cage door was opened and a pin thrown on the floor. The canary at once flew down to it, picked it up in its bill and cleverly stuck it upright in the carpet, after which it burst into song, as if rejoicing at its success. The folk of the house, believing the lady had proved her ownership of the bird, permitted her, says Little Folks, to take the songster away to her home.

He Missed Her.

A speech which had a pathetic as well as an amusing side is said to have been made by an old New Hampshire man on the occasion of his second wedding.

"Neighbors," he said to those who had witnessed the simple ceremony, "you all know that this good friend that's consented to marry me is something of a stranger in our town. Now, I feel kind of insufficient, being only a man, to make her acquainted with everybody as quick as I'd like to. So I'm a-going to depend on you women folks," he added, with a confiding smile at the members of the gentler sex, "to make her feel at home among us, just as my first wife would do if she was here today. I miss her consider'ble all the time, but more'n usual on an occasion like this!"

Unaccommodating Stamp Clerk.

"One hundred two's?" said the post-office clerk. "Yes, ma'am."

"And charge them to Mr. Newell, No. 411!"

"Sorry, ma'am," interrupted the clerk, "but we can't do that."

"You can't?" the young bride exclaimed indignantly. "My husband's credit is good every where, and, besides, we always get our letters from your-

"Tomorrow is my wife's birthday. In this package I am bringing her a pair of trousers which I had made to my measure and which I shall wear. In this parcel is a pair of the very best patent slacks, size 8½, a good deal too big for my wife; in this package is a box of cigars, and in my pockets I have a new meerschaum pipe and a packet of tobacco. Now, I don't see how she can fail to have a happy birthday. Do you? I hope she'll enjoy it, for I want to get even for all the pretty things she has given me."—London placed in the hands of the Finance Committee to report.

The report of the Finance Committee together with the treasurer's statement was read and adopted.

The Street Committee reported expenditure of $2 60, which was received.

Mr. W. C. Scott, special agent Bell Telephone Co., was heard in regard to the introducing of a new system alarm. As the said company has refused to enter into a renew the contract for the old system the is compelled to take some action. Scott proposed to put in a complete new system of fire alarm at a cost to be owned and controlled by the and had an exhibit of the same in the lobby of the town hall. The adjourned for a short time to allow members to examine the working exhibit, which was in charge of an employee of the company who endeavored to explain the way it worked and answer in which it should be located. The cost of running it would probably between $250 and $300 a year, and have six boxes, the same number old system. The council resumed and after considerable discussion later was referred to the Fire, Water Light Committee to report at a meeting to be held either Friday or Saturday evening when Mr. Scott would be present.

Mr. Alf. Knight and Mr. W. S. Iton, on behalf of the Napanee Improvement Company, were heard, next session of the Ontario Government is proposed to introduce an Act to with the Petworth and other dams Napanee river, and the above gentlemen asked the council to resolution, by a unanimous vote, the government to take no action which would be an incalculable injury to owners and manufacturers all along said river. The request was granted.

The Printing and By law Committee reported recommending the payment NAPANEE EXPRESS account.

A by-law for the appointment of engineer and assistant of the Napanee brigade was next taken up. It was moved by Carson and Madole that the name R. Dinner be inserted in the blank moved in amendment by Wall Symington that the name of S. Lin be inserted. The original motion carried was moved by Carson and Madole; second blank be filled in with the name C. W. Conway, as assistant, and in amendment by Waller and Symington the name of E. McCabe be inserted. The original motion also carried. The salaries were filled in with the names of $20 and $15 respectively.

The Finance Committee was further time to report on the advice of the appointment of a Medical Inspector.

On motion the clerk was instructed to negotiate with the company to locate, previously mentioned, ascertain what kind of building would need, the number of hand would employ, and any information taining to the said company.

It was moved by Coun. Symington seconded by Coun. Leonard, that the Assistant Chief of the Napanee brigade furnish the council with the list of thirty men for the purpose of improving the efficiency of the fire company their opinion the said company was to the standard it should be. A number of the firemen were in attendance and very indignant at the idea. They said that when the new company was they were given full control to run the business as they liked, and if any weed of inferior men took place the whole would resign. The captain then had the resignation of eighteen of the take effect immediately. Consideration followed and then the was voted upon. The vote stood favor of the motion when the Mayor hand in the game. It seems the Mayor allowed two votes and although (he) did not know much about the circumstances he would have to declare the result. The firemen then withdrew their resignations.

The following accounts were paid: S. C. Denison, $32.50; L. M. 75c; A. W. Grange & Bro., $2.10; W. Tel. Co., $3.03; Bell Telephone for fire alarm, $150, and for town hi-to report. A report of the Finance Committee, with the treasurer's monthly statement was read and adopted.

Street Committee reported an expenditure of $2.60, which was received and paid.

W. C. Scott, special agent of the Telephone Co., was heard in reference introducing of a new system of fire alarm.

As the said company has absolutely refused to enter into a renewal of contract for the old system the council voted to take some action. Mr. proposed to put in a complete and system of fire alarm at a cost of $1250, owned and controlled by the town, and an exhibit of the same arranged in bby of the town hall. The council met for a short time to allow the others to examine the working of the t, which was in charge of one of the yees of the company who endeavored to stop the way it worked and the man which it should be looked after. of running it would probably be en $250 and $300 a year, and would im boxes, the same number as the stem. The council resumed business after considerable discussion the mat s referred to the Fire, Water and

Committee to report at a special ing to be held either Friday or Saturday when Mr. Scott would again sent.

Alf. Knight and Mr. W. S. Herring, behalf of the Napanee River In- nent Company, were heard. At the session of the Ontario Government it posed to introduce an Act to do away the Petworth and other dams on the river, and the above named men asked the council to pass a ion, by a unanimous vote, praying vernment to take no action as it be an insurmountable injury to the mills and manufacturers all along the ver. The request was granted.

There are some curious features connected with French parliamentary elections. For instance, no wall literature issued by a candidate or his friends may be printed on white paper, white being the color reserved for official announcements. In the days of the empire, when official candidates were known in the land, the addresses of the government's nominees were printed on white paper, and this no doubt had due weight with the more ignorant voters. Again, any elector whose name is mentioned in a newspaper can, if he feel himself aggrieved, call upon the editor to publish a reply. This, however, is not confined to elections, but is a right enjoyed by French citizens under the law of the country.—London Mail.

The Pig In Water.

Of pigs it is commonly reported that so queerly fashioned are they that if they attempt to swim they cut their throats with their fore feet, but this is only an old wife's fable. Whether wild or tame, they are all good swimmers, though, owing to the shortness of their legs, they just touch their throats with their fore feet and beat the water very high. Many of the islands of the southern seas are now inhabited by wild pigs, which are the descendants of those which have swum ashore, sometimes great distances from wrecked vessels.

DIAMOND DYES

For twenty-five years Diamond Dyes have been acknowledged as the standards of excellence for domestic dyeing in every part of the world.

Jealous competitors have labored hard to foist their crude preparation on the public, and in their work of deception have imitated us closely as they dared, the style of package used by the manufacturers of Diamond Dyes.

The manufacturers of adulterated dyes have deceived many people in the past. However, one trial of the common dyes was enough for those who bought them. The deceptions sent home dyers back to the ever reliable Diamond Dyes, so easy to use and always successful.

The new century comes in with Diamond Dyes leading the whole world, and the demand increases every day. While many crude dyes have died with the new century, there is still need to exercise care in buying, as some merchants have still a stock of common dyes which they desire to dispose of. Home dyers who wish to save money, avoid failure, loss of goods and bitter disappointment, should insist upon getting the warranted Diamond Dyes when they ask for them.

A pound of cork will sustain in the water a man weighing 154 pounds.

Heat Radiation.

The tendency of heat to diffuse itself is effected by radiation, conduction and convection. Nearly all dull and dark substances are good radiators, while bright, polished surfaces radiate badly. Some substances conduct heat more freely than others, silver among the metals being the best conductor, and as a unit of measurement is taken at 1,000. Compared with silver as a conductor, gold is 981, copper 845, zinc 641, tin 422, steel 397 and wrought iron 436. Glass, wood, gases, liquids and resinous substances are bad conductors. Water is such a poor conductor that if heat is applied to the top it will boil at the top, while the bottom will remain cold. — Newcastle (England) Chronicle.

WELL DIRECTED SYMPATHY.

There is nothing that appeals to the sympathy of persons more than a man willing but unable to work through illness. Mr. William Coburn (carter), 148 Pine Street, Kingston, Ont., was one of these unfortunate. He suffered from rheumatism in the hip and across the small of his back. "I was so bad," said he, "that I was unable to turn in bed. I was forced to give up work. I suffered the greatest agony; to make matters worse, cramps added to my pain. The cords of my legs used to be doubled up into bunches as big as my fist. After trying every other remedy and not being relieved by doctors' medicine, I was prevailed upon to try Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure. I had not taken the contents of two bottles before I was able to leave my bed and return to work, and the pains have not troubled me since."

Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure is put up in 50 cent bottles, containing ten days' treatment. For sale by all druggists and dealers in medicine. The Dr. Hall Medicine Co., Kingston, Ont.

THEY WERE ALL SCARED.

A Case of Highway Robbery With a Peculiar Ending.

What the hero of this story kicks about is the fact that his wife forgot her sacred word never to say anything regarding it. His business keeps him out late, and he frequently carries considerable money. When footpads are reported in evidence, he gets as near home as he can by street car and then takes the best lighted route to his house.

One night he had reached the front of his own place and had just drawn a long sigh of relief when the order "Hands up!" startled him into compliance. One man held a gun in the immediate neighborhood of his ear and another systematically robbed him of everything worth carrying off. The order then was that he walk around the block so as to defer the use of his telephone, and it was clearly stated that any attempt to turn back, run or call for help would result in his being assassinated.

Before he reached the corner it struck him that the voice of one of the men sounded familiar and then that its owner was a near neighbor greatly given to practical joking. Back he went on tiptoes, his revolver in his right hand, and surprised the footpads as they were dividing the spoils. He made them lay everything on the walk, and when they straightened up awaiting the next order he discovered that both were total strangers. His hand dropped from sheer terror, and then the robbers ran one way, while he sprinted the other. Half an hour later his wife and a lantern a Tested.

IT HAS NEVER DISAPPOINTED
THE SICK.

Paine's Celery Compound Being a Great Physician's Prescription
Is Recommended by the Ablest Doctors.

It's Use Quickly Restores the Weak, Rundown and Ailing to Perfect Health.

The relative merit and efficiency of Paine's Celery Compound, in comparison with all liquid medicines and pills for making sick people well, is clearly shown in the intelligent character and standing of the people who are using it at the present time to cure nervous debility, sleeplessness, headache, dyspepsia, rheumatism and kidney and liver trouble.

Paine's Celery Compound to day is the choice of physicians, clergymen, professional men, generally, bankers, members of parliament, business men and our best people. When in health, sickness and suffering come to the old or young, the wise and intelligent use Paine's Celery Compound and banish their troubles. Its reliability and efficacy have made it a prized home medicine.

With an established and unassailable reputation for "making sick people well," Paine's Celery Compound is offered to the breakdowns of health as the only medicine that can positively restore health, vigor and true life. Do not be induced by substitutes to take the something called just as good; insist upon getting Paine's Celery Compound, the kind that cures.

Belleville seems to have been particularly unfortunate in the bonus business. Some years ago it granted a bonus to a large stove factory. This industry failed, and after a few years the large factory erected by the firm was sold at about a quarter of its value to a canning firm. It gave a large bonus to a railway running north, which carried trade away from the city instead of increasing the trade—it built a street railway which they have been trying for years to place on a paying basis, without success, which now is in the hands of the Bank of Montreal. It built the Bay bridge, which has never realized the expectations of its promoters by depopulating Prince Edward and drawing all its trade to that city. More recently it paid a heavy bonus to smelting works, which, it is understood, is in financial trouble, and has been closed down—citizens are grumbling at the heavy load they are compelled to carry—and the expected boom fails to materialize. What next?—Picton Gazette.

Mistake of the New Riveter.

A party of six brawny men were engaged in an animated discussion at McKees Rocks. It was noticed that five index fingers were missing from the gesticulating hands. Only one man had all of the fingers he was born with.

"They're riveters from Schoenville," said a man who was asked. "They say most of the male children born down there now have the forefinger missing from their right hand. The riveters at the Pressed Steel Car shop work one inside of the car and one outside. The man inside shoves the rivets through, and the man outside swings the hammer. They are paid by the piece, and they work fast. Often the rivet won't fit, and if the man inside of the car happens to be new at the work he sticks his finger through the hole to learn what is wrong. The man outside promptly smashes the finger with his sledge. He doesn't do it purposely, but he works so rapidly that he can't tell a blackened finger from a rivet. He never knows his error until he sees the blood spurting from the stump of the finger. None of the riveters has lost more than one finger in that way."

Helping the Enemy.

A coal beaver was getting in a load of coal in the suburbs of London. He was shoveling in the coals at a good rate when he was startled by a terrific yell from the house adjoining.

"Wot the dickens is the matter?" queried the coalman, starting up.

A disheveled looking individual made his appearance at the door.

"Matter, you thickhead!" shouted the man, frantically endeavoring to pull his hair up in clots by the roots, "you are putting the coal down the wrong hole. My wife's people live there!"—London Tit-Bits.

His Limit.

"I'm getting along," said Mr. Cumrox. "I'm progressing slowly, but surely."

In what?"

"Culture. I've been traveling around with Mrs. C. and the girls until I'm getting right refined. But there's one thing I don't think I'll achieve. I don't believe I'll ever be able to go into an antique store and tell the difference between bric-a-brac and junk."

"Opportune" once signified nothing more than "to be at the harbor." An opportune ship was a ship which had come to port.

The Baby Sick?

Then probably it's a cold. Babies catch cold so easily and recover so slowly. Not slowly, however, when you use Vapo-Cresolene. Then a single night is all that is necessary for a cure. You just put some Cresolene in the vaporiser, light the lamp beneath, and place near the crib. While baby sleeps he breathes in the healing vapor. Cold sores, inflamed membranes heal, and all trouble ceases. It's a perfect specific for whooping-cough and croup.

Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists everywhere. A Vapo-Cresolene outfit, including the Vaporizer and Lamp, which should last a life-time, and a bottle of Cresolene, complete, $1.50; extra supplies of Cresolene 25 cents and 50 cents. # Whooping Cough.

Don't you dread it? There's not a sensible, well-read person in the world who isn't afraid of whooping-cough. It's a most distressing disease and a very dangerous one, too. The child is so liable to have convulsions, pneumonia or bronchitis as a complication.

The cause of the disease is a germ which rests in the back part of the throat and upper air-passages. How can these germs be destroyed? Certainly not by taking medicine into the stomach. Then why not breathe something into the throat that will destroy them?

That is just what Vapo-Cresolene does. You breathe-in the vapor; it passes right over the germs, destroying every one of them. All inflammation quickly subsides, healing rapidly takes place, and recovery is prompt and perfect.

P. C. BARKER, M.D., Physician in Chief, Morristown Memorial Hospital, Morristown, N.J.:—"I have depended upon Vapo-Cresolene for years past in treating whooping-cough and bronchitis, especially in infants and young children. The beneficial effects of the vapor have been so evident, that some of my patients are in the habit of starting the lamp at night in their children's room for the relief of common colds."

The energy of one of the oldest inhabitants of a Massachusetts town is a byword among his neighbors and a trial to his grandchildren, who have not inherited their full share of his active temper.

His grandson John in particular suffers from the old man's untiring industry, for John is his assistant in the little grocery shop, where everything, from codfish to brooms, may be found. A purchaser of gingersnaps lingered one day to hear the noontime address delivered to poor John by his grandfather.

"Now, Johnny, I'm a-going home for my dinner," said the old man briskly, "and on the way I'll carry up these pails to Miss Mansen and fetch back her kerosene can. I shall be gone up-wards of half an hour. You'll have plenty of time to eat your luncheon, and while you're resting after that I wish you'd saw up that little mess of wood that lays out by the back door and split it up for stove kindling, for the weather's turning sharp a-ready.

"Most likely I'll be back 'fore you get out o' work, and anyways I don't want to keep you at it all the time, so if there's a few extra minutes jest set down and make out a bill or two. The fust of the month'll be upon us 'fore we know it!"—Youth's Companion.

THE WHITE ROSE.

But it had suddenly occurred, to her that, if he really wished for this introduction, it would be better that she should undertake it. She would know then all that passed. She turned to him with a charming smile.

"I shall be delighted," she said. "Nothing will give me greater pleasure. I am not at all tired, and the walk by the river is beautiful."

He thought that he had never met a more amiable girl, and his heart warmed to her; but his eyes still lingered on the fair delicate face under the trees.

"So they call her the 'white rose?'" he said, musingly.

"Yes," Lola replied, and then added quickly, "and they call me the 'red rose.'"

"All I can say is that I am very glad that I did not live in the days of the Wars of the Roses—I should not have known whether to wear the red or the white."

"You would have made up your mind in time," she said, thoughtfully. "Every man does who has a mind worth making up."

"Do you think so? At any rate, I am well content not to be obliged to make any choice—in fact, I could not. The 'white rose' is irresistible, the 'red rose'—and he bowed low to her—"charming. If I had been in the place of Paris, I could never have given in the apple—each style is so perfect in its way."

"I respect Paris," Lola rejoined, quickly. "He made up his mind at once. I like prompt decisions."

"Do you?" he said, with some amusement. "I should say that you are likely to be gratified. So far as I have seen the world, there are far more quick and hasty decisions than slow and wise ones."

Dolores had seen the two from the distance, and guessed at once that the handsome young man walking by Lola's side was one of her list of "eligibles." It must be Sir Karl. She knew every one else. She could not help smiling. Was this the promised kindness, or the result of accident? She saw that Lola was all smiles and amiability, therefore she knew that all must be going well.

In a few seconds they were with her, and the children ran away. Lola introduced Sir Karl, and watched closely the result. Certainly his eyes lingered on the "white rose," and there was no mistaking the admiration in their depths, but he spoke to Dolores in much the same fashion as he had spoken to her.

"I have had the first chance," thought Lola, "and I will make the most of it. I will be so charming and so amiable that he will be compelled to recognize the difference between a white rose and a red one."

Sir Karl talked for a few minutes to Dolores, Lola listening with sharpened ears. But he said very much the same as he had said to her.

He told Dolores that he had had fected. When will its wonders stop? I should like to be on earth when it and other marvelous things are in general use. And there is one thing above others I should like to know."

"What is that?" asked Sir Karl, who was somewhat amused at her remarks.

"I should like to know whether men will so far overcome the difficulties of atmosphere, time and place, as to get to the planets."

"No," returned Sir Karl, "I think we shall have to be satisfied with our own world, Miss de Ferras."

"Our own," said Dolores, "and the beautiful world that is to come hereafter."

In some vague fashion those few simple words pleased him more than all Lola's aspirations. He would have said more; but at that moment Lady Fielden came up to them, bringing with her a tall, distinguished-looking man, whose noble, kindly face was pleasant, though not handsome.

"Lord Rhysworth," thought Lola, and her heart gave a great bound.

It was a strange coincidence that she and her rival should meet the two most eligible men in the county together.

Watching always, and watching keenly, Miss de Ferras saw at once that she would have but little chance with Lord Rhysworth. A perfect change came over his face when he talked to Dolores; a light filled his eyes, and he seemed to forget everyone else.

"This is as it should be," thought Lola. "Lord Rhysworth for Dolores, the handsome young Baronet for me!"

She was perfectly content.

Lord Rhysworth greeted her very kindly; he said that he remembered having seen her when she was a child and made some pretty complimentary speeches on her return; but all the time his eyes were fixed upon the face of Dolores. Then Lady Fielden suggested that they should go to the archery ground. But none of the quartet cared about moving. It was very pleasant to stand chatting under the lime trees. For some few minutes they all kept together; then Lord Rhysworth and Dolores gradually gained ground, and Sir Karl, with Lola, was left at some little distance. Lola was delighted. She believed that for once Providence was going to favor her with the dearest wish of her heart. Her spirits rose; she had said to herself that she would keep Sir Karl by her side, and she did so. He could not resist the witching charm of her drollery, her wit, her sparkling talk.

One trifling circumstance dwelt in Sir Karl's mind. As Dolores and he passed some beautiful roses, Lord Rhysworth stopped and gathered a lovely white one. He placed it proudly in his coat; and Sir Karl felt that he wore it as a knight of old wore his ladies' names. The latter unconsciously knew that her fate in life was settled. She would be Lady Allanmore of Scarsdale. She liked Sir Karl so well that she would not have exchanged her anticipated lot in life to be made a queen. She felt so confident as to the influence of her beauty that no thought of failure ever came to her.

Dolores Clefden, sitting in the solitude of her own room, could recall all these events. She remembered the months that had passed since the school-fete, the ball, the entertainments, the drives and walks. Whether Sir Karl liked her or not she could not say, but she cared for him, more than for any one she had ever seen. Lola, in all their conversations, openly claimed him. She talked about him until she made herself believe all that she had wished; and Dolores hardly avowed, even to herself, what keen pain these confidential communications gave her. Yet, despite all that Lola told her, there was often a doubt in the girl's mind as to whether Sir Karl did love the beautiful French girl.

As for Sir Karl himself, he was a little bewildered. He had never before seen two such girls. Left to himself, he would have preferred Dolores—her character pleased him most. He thought her style of beauty the sweetest and fairest. But Lola dazzled him. She made herself most attractive to him, and exercised all her powers of fascination when in his company. She did not leave him much time to attend to others. When they were in the same room together, she always contrived to engross his whole attention without his perceiving or being conscious of it. She directed against him the whole artillery of her charms. She flattered him, yet so adroitly that he never perceived the flattery. Dolores, seeing all this, wondered much. She believed that Sir Karl preferred her, although outwardly he seemed to prefer Lola. She was too noble to suspect that it was Lola's clever devices which kept him always at her side.

As the summer wore on, Dolores found herself thinking more and more of the young Baronet. Unlike Lola, who had no notion that a woman's love should always be mute, Dolores would have died a thousand deaths rather than that Sir Karl should have guessed her secret. The very consciousness that she did care for him, made her shy, cold, and reserved with him, so much so that at times he left her to seek refuge and amusement with Lola. They were playing at cross purposes truly, and in after years more than one life was wrecked by it; but Dolores was not all to blame.

She could remember many times when he had sought her; and she had fancied that there was something deeper than admiration in his manner. Often during the long warm evenings he had ridden over to White Cliffe, avowing that he enjoyed an evening with the squire, and that there was no place he liked so well as the quaint old house, and the old-fashioned garden at White Cliffe. But more often than not during those evenings, Dolores would leave them alone together. The pleasure was too much like pain; just as the pain

About the House.

SYSTEM FOR HOUSEWORK
If the thoughtful housewife will follow the plan suggested below she never regret it. More systematic housekeeping is the remedy for all the minor evils connected with the present-day help problem.

No one would expect to establish a successful business without conducting it upon a systematic basis. Especially would this be important in a business requiring employees. Method should be employed even the least important part.

Many fail to recognize housekeeping as a business that must be conducted with the same precision as business of a different nature. Order for it to run smoothly and successfully. To employ methods of housekeeping is an exception to the rule; the different kinds of work oftentimes performed when the inclinations seem to dictate greatest part of the work of the week being allowed to remain done until, perhaps, only two remain in which to do the work; and, in consequence, the servant is overtaxed in doing that might have been done with no trouble to the worker had it been done systematically.

System cannot be eliminated. The housekeeping of those who are dependent upon but one servant to do the general housework; an housewife must herself do the systematizing, as few servants are able of doing it wisely.

Sit down with pen and paper under the head of Usual Every Work, write down in the order which it could be performed conveniently and with dispatch the work which seems necessary to be done daily. Determine rooms must receive daily attention and the work to be done in them; they must be thoroughly swept, dusted, etc.; what cupboards, sideboards, etc., must receive cleaning in kitchen and pantry; work that must be done in sleeping rooms; the lamps that must receive daily attention; the rooms that require a second setting in after the noon meal; in fact, items should be jotted down, eve washing of dishes. This is for the purpose of appointing a suitable time for the doing of each piece of work; not a certain time of day but one kind of work should be given place upon the paper before another, and the work to be done in the order in which it has been ten; as certain kinds of work if done before another will hasten the work of the day, and fuel may be saved in this way.

Next, determine what work must be done to keep the house in a satisfactory condition throughout the week, the work which does not require repetition each day; and divide equally as possible into six parts assign a certain part to a certain day of the week. To one day assign washing; to another the ironing

Sir Karl talked for a few minutes to Dolores, Lola listening with sharpened ears. But he said very much the same as he had said to her.

He told Dolores that he had had no time to call at White Cliffe, but he should do so at once; he regretted not having been at home when the Squire had called. He liked the simple girlish way in which she said:

"You will find White Cliffe a very quiet, old-fashioned place. It is one of the oldest houses in the county."

"That is just the kind of place I like," he answered. "One seldom sees anything quiet or old-fashioned these days. I am often half undecided as to whether the olden days were not the best."

"I am sure they were not," remarked Lola. "I think every age improves; and I am quite satisfied with the one in which I live."

"I am very glad to hear it," said Sir Karl, "and you, Miss Cleeden?"

"I am very happy," she replied, "and think no age could be better than this."

"My belief," observed Lola, "is that the world is in its infancy. I believe we are only just beginning to understand. We are emerging from darkness into light; but the light is faint yet. I should like to return to the world when it reaches its middle age—to see what steam, electricity, and all the wonders of science have done. I should like to see the telephone per-her with the dearest wish of her heart. Her spirits rose; she had said to herself that she would keep Sir Karl by her side, and she did so. He could not resist the witching charm of her drollery, her wit, her sparkling talk.

One trifling circumstance dwelt in Sir Karl's mind. As Dolores and he passed some beautiful roses, Lord Rhysworth stopped and gathered a lovely white one. He placed it proudly in his coat; and Sir Karl felt that he wore it as a knight of old wore his lady's colors. The utter unconsciousness of Miss Cleeden struck him.

"She is like a white rose," thought Sir Karl; "as innocent and as sweet. I like her the better of the two."

Yet something prompted him. He hardy knew what, to gather for himself two rosebuds, one white, the other red, and place them together in his button-hole.

Lola smiled when she saw them—a smile that had more meaning than words.

"It is all right for the present," she said to herself; "but the time shall come when he shall dare neither to gather nor wear a white rose."

Dolores remembered every incident of the fete. She was not much given to thinking about love or lovers; but when she went home that evening she thought a great deal about Sir Karl Allamore.

CHAPTER IV.

Lola de Ferras was practical and in some respects sensible. She decided from the first hour that she saw Lord Rhysworth, that all attempts to captivate him would be in vain; so she wasted no more time in the endeavor. Every day she liked Sir Karl more and more. She had made up her mind

she could remember many times when he had sought her; and she had fancied that there was something deeper than admiration in his manner. Often during the long, warm evenings he had ridden over to White Cliffe, knowing that he enjoyed an evening with the Squire, and that there was no place he liked so well as the quaint old house, and the old-fashioned garden at White Cliffe. But more often than not during those evenings, Dolores would leave them alone together. The pleasure was too much like pain; just as the pain resembled pleasure; they were so subtly blended that she could not separate them, she could hardly tell one from the other. When she heard the sound of his voice, her heart would beat violently, her sweet face grow pale as a white rose, her courage fail her, her strength seem to give way. Then, lest he should guess the cause of her emotion, she would send some excuse and decline to see him.

Feeling piqued, and not understanding what her motive was, Sir Karl would not stay long after that, but would ride off to Beaulieu. He did not perceive that Dolores's shy avoidance of him was caused by her very love for him—a love she was afraid he should see and perhaps despise.

It was a strange destiny that led these two girls, so different in appearance, in manner, and in everything else, to love the same man; and so confused was Dolores with her own thoughts that she did not notice that day by day Lord Rhysworth showed her more affection. He was her father's friend; and she never thought of him in any other light.

So at cross-purposes the two girls and their admirers played while the summer days rolled by. That which had been a pastime for Lola, became a dangerously earnest passion, while Sir Karl seemed to give no thought to love or marriage. Lola was beginning to wonder when he would, when she should hear him say the words her whole heart longed to hear. She had certainly gone as far as she dared. If he did not understand her sentiments it was not her fault, for she did her best to make them clear to him. It was just at this juncture that news came of the Squire's ruin.

Lord Rhysworth's offer of marriage had taken Dolores by surprise. No idea of such a thing had ever dawned upon her mind. She saw in it the death of her own love and the salvation of her father. What should she do? As she sat face to face with the great problem of her life, certain solemn truths came home to her. She realized as she had never realized before that she loved Sir Karl. At the same time all her maidenly pride and modesty rose in rebellion against the fact that she loved a man who had never spoken of love to her. She said to herself that she would not let it interfere with her decision, she would not let the element appear in her life at all; she would decide and act quite independently of it. Yet her heart pleaded for herself; it was her own life, she had to make or mar; she had but one—why should it not be a happy one?

the order in which it has been given; as certain kinds of work if before another will hasten the work of the day, and fuel may be saved in this way.

Next, determine what work must be done to keep the house in a satisfactory condition throughout the entire week, the work which does not require repetition each day; and divide it equally as possible into six parts, assign a certain part to a certain day. To one day assign washing; to another the ironing, another a general cleaning of whole house, that is, the washing windows, wood-work that requires a weekly cleaning, cupboards, closets, sink-closets, etc.; to another day assign the sweeping and dusting of rooms that do not receive this attention daily; to another day the making of cakes, cookies, pies, etc., the washing of floors. Besides, there are various small jobs of work which must be included with these already named, but they should be added to the work of the days which are lightest to perform. There should be no such additions to the work of days to which washing and sweeping are assigned.

This first draft of a housekeeper's plan will prove to be a most impractical, but by using it for reference, executing the work of a week, takes will be noted, and corrected, until it seems satisfactory, should then be copied into a blank-book and given the servant reference. In six months' time housekeeper can revise this first and greatly improve it.

It may seem foolish to bring the work down to so methodical a scale as this, but it has actually been put into practice, and its value proved beyond doubt. It has proved especially helpful in cases where a frequent change of young and inexperienced help has been necessary. At least a month must be given it for trial in that time order will be restored in the household where confusion previously reigned. Duties that are forgotten and left unperformed would put the whole household machinery out of gear, are far more likely to receive attention if assigned a certain day and a certain time place for everything, and every item in its place, is a valuable motto; its equal is found in a time for everything, and everything done at proper time.

THE MORNING NAP.

The following article sets before an interesting manner the work which a bad beginning in the morning owing to lack of resolution, may be the whole day.

It seems a very insignificant detail that morning nap, but what an amount of trouble it manages to stir otherwise peaceful families! A household is kept in almost constant turmoil wholly because of this little self-indulgence. Near the family jars may be traced the fact that one member of the family did not have strength of mind enough to get up in the morning when called.

The mother is one of those mothers who have the formed habit of

PNEUMONIA COMES FROM LA GRIPPE.

Exhaustion or Low Vitality—Catching Cold—La Grippe—Pneumonia—These Are the Steps Which Many Are Following.

The ravages of pneumonia are felt all over the land. This year more than in any preceding one this ugly disease is prevalent. Doctors say that the prevalence of this destroyer of life is the direct result of an epidemic form of la grippe, and ordinary pneumonia is never so vicious as la grippe pneumonia.

La grippe usually attacks persons of low vitality, and develops into dysentery, nervous disorders, or more frequently into pneumonia. During the prevalence of la grippe people are advised to treat seriously everything in the form of a cold. By the prompt use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine la grippe can always be prevented or cured.

Anyone who has witnessed the dreadful results of la grippe developing into pneumonia or other serious lung troubles knows the importance of acting promptly when the first symptoms of cold become apparent. It is truly wonderful how thoroughly efficient Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has proven in the treatment of la grippe and heavy chest colds. It not only affords relief to the cough and inflamed air passages, but actually cures the disease and drives the pains and aches from the bones.

Mrs. F. Dwyer, of Chesterville, says: "My little girl, of three years, had an attack of bronchial pneumonia. My husband and I thought she was going to leave the world, as her case resisted the doctors' treatment. I bought a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine from our popular druggist, W. G. Bolster. After the first two or three doses the child began to get better, and we are thankful to say is all right to-day, after seven weeks' sickness."

La grippe is too serious a foe to trifle with, and pneumonia is most frequently fatal. It is better to guard against these by the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Scores of thousands of people are ready to endorse it as the most effective throat and lung treatment which medical science affords. Be sure you get what you ask for. It costs no more than ordinary cough mixtures; 25 cents a bottle; family size, three times as much for 60 cents. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

About the House.

STEM FOR HOUSEWORK

the thoughtful housewife will follow the plan suggested below she will regret it. More system in keeping is the remedy for nearly all minor evils connected with present-day help problems.

One would expect to establish successful business without casting it upon a systematic basis. If this be important business requiring employees, should method be employed in the least important parts.

One fails to recognize housekeeping as a business that must be conducted with the same precision as a task of a different nature, in for it to run smoothly and surely. To employ method in keeping is an exception and not rule; the different kinds of work oftentimes performed whenever inclinations seem to dictate, the best part of the work of the week being allowed to remain until, perhaps, only two days in which to do the work of end, in consequence, the strength taxed in doing that which has been done with no injury a worker had it been done systematically.

System cannot be eliminated from housekeeping of those who are dependent upon but one servant to do general housework; and the wife must herself do the systemizing, as few servants are capable of doing it wisely.

down with pen and paper, and, the head of Usual Every-Day, write down in the order in which it could be performed most conveniently and with dispatch, the work which seems necessary to be done daily.

Determine what must receive daily attention; the work to be done in them, if must be thoroughly swept and, etc.; what cupboards, shelves, etc., must receive daily cleaning in kitchen and pantry; the work that must be done in sleeping; the lamps that must receive attention; the rooms that require a second setting in order the noon meal; in fact, every room should be jotted down, even the number of dishes. This is for the purpose of appointing a special for the doing of each piece of work at a certain time of day, but kind of work should be given a place upon the paper before or after, and the work to be done in order in which it has been written. Certain kinds of work if done another will hasten the whole of the day, and fuel may also be saved in this way.

Determine what work must be to keep the house in a satisfactory condition throughout the entire the work which does not require attention each day; and divide it as far as possible into six parts, and a certain part to a certain day of the week. To one day assign the to another the ironing; to rising, and she cannot understand the indolence and inertia which make any one lie drowsily in bed on a beautiful bright morning. She herself longs to get up and get at the day's work. It would be utterly impossible for her to waste the best part of the day in sleep. The rest of the family, however, are not so fortunate. One in particular is a slave to his extra forty winks.

It is not that he does not desire to rise in time. He has formed resolution after resolution, but all to no purpose. He would like to get started early as well as any one, and every night he is sure that the next day he will, but in the morning it does not seem at all the same. So down he comes, rushing, half an hour late each morning, angry with himself because he knows he will be chasing that lost half-hour vainly all through the day, angry with the rest of the world because he knows he is in the wrong, and he imagines they think so.

It's all a bad habit, simply one of those weaknesses that people yield to because they don't seem large enough to fight against. No real struggle seems worth while. It would be easier after a few determined efforts to overcome this inclination, and wouldn't it be worth while to make such efforts if we thought at length we could join the ranks of those most blessed among men, the people who like to get up early!

TWO NEW RECIPES FOR SOUP.

The two following recipes have been proven most delicious. They give hints of other uses to which the new flaked foods may be put.

Cream of Pea Soup—One quart of chicken stock boiled slowly for thirty minutes, with three cloves, two bay leaves and five drops of burnt onion juice. Strain, and add one large cupful of flaked peas and cook ten minutes, then add one large cupful of cream and milk mixed, one heaping tablespoonful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a pinch of cayenne pepper.

Great care should be used not to use more than a pinch of the latter. When it boils up it is ready to serve. Serve in cups with croutons made by browning in the oven small cubes of bread until they are crisp like toast.

Bean Soup—One quart of beef stock, two bay leaves, three cloves and a small onion, boiled together for thirty minutes; strain and add one cupful of flaked beans; let it cook slowly for ten minutes, then add two-thirds of a cupful of milk and cream, a dessertspoonful of butter, a pinch of cayenne pepper and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Serve at once with croutons.

The flaked peas and beans have only lately been placed on the market in one pound packages, and are most nutritious as well as appetizing.

SARDINELIES.

Select a can of good sized, firm sardines, drain off the oil and place them on brown paper for a moment before broiling; arrange them on a double broiler and broil two minutes on each side over a brisk fire; cut strips of bread a little longer and wider than the sardines, removing all crusts; fry in smoking hot fat. ## CAPT. STARLIGHT IS DEAD

FAMOUS AUSTRALIAN ROBBER DIED IN RESPECTABILITY.

For Many Years He Was the Terror of the Highways — The Dick Turpin of the Colonies—He Finally Obtained Service Under An Alias.

Capt. Starlight is dead. When this notorious Australian bushranger of thirty years ago passed away, it was under an alias of respectability. He occupied a position of trust. Capt. Starlight died in the service of the very government which had proclaimed him an outlaw. So another chapter has been developed in the life of the dashing Capt. Starlight, immortalized by Rolf Boldrewood in his story "Robbery Under Arms." After it may be written Finis, for it is the last chapter of all, marking the end of this famous antipodean criminal.

The sudden death of Maj. Patrick Edward Pelly, an attaché of the Geological Department of the Government of West Australia, led to the revelation of his identity. Maj. Pelly, died from the effects of poison supposed to have been taken by mistake for medicine. In the town of Perth, where he resided Maj. Pelly was recognized as possessing superior mental attainments. He was singularly devout in his religious observances, but those who came in contact with him could not understand his strange ways.

Only on rare occasions was he known to speak of himself, and all the information he ever volunteered, was that he had served in the army and had seen active service. In proof of experiences on the field of battle the Major displayed to some of his friends bullet wounds on various parts of his body, and in the face of such evidence none doubted his word. The good people of Perth, did not seek for credentials, and as he did not thrust himself on society he was never required to display any proof of his bona fides other than the bullet wounds. From hints dropped at various times it was also gathered that he was a descendant of

AN OLD IRISH FAMILY.

Pelly was of a retiring disposition, and just a trifle inclined toward obsequiousness.

When his death occurred as a result of a dose of cyanide of potassium, a copy of an Australian paper containing a statement of his decease reached one Father Pelly in Ireland, and the priest communicated with a brother confined in a jail in Victoria, N.S.W., on the subject. This prisoner, whose name is Patrick Edward Pelly, serving a life sentence, wrote to the Coroner at Perth, what was at first regarded as an extraordinary letter, but the communication being turned over to the police set them inquiring. The writer suggested that the deceased might be Frank Gordon, a former fellow-prisoner, to whom he had given, upon Gordon's discharge, from jail, a number of his family papers and photographs.

From his cell in Pentridge jail the real Patrick Edward Pelly described various documents he had given Gordon in 1887, requesting Gordon, up-him on and then coolly robbed the trader.

Capt. Starlight particularly fancied a good horse and blooded cattle. Some of his horse and cattle robberies were as bold as the deeds of the border thieves in England a few hundred years ago. On one occasion when he pined for a taste of urban life, Starlight collected 100 HEAD OF CATTLE, which he had stolen from time to time drove them to South Australia, sold them for good prices, and with the proceeds established himself in local society, cutting a very wide swath for a few weeks. The identification of a prize bull, sold with other less valuable cattle, induced the dashing bushranger to make a hurried return to country life.

Starlight's last big exploit was the shooting of Constable McCabe in Shearer's public house on the Warrego River, in 1869. The redoubtable Starlight and his partner, Rutherford, after an exciting bit of road work, were in the bar of Shearer's, drinking with their unsuspecting host. A by-stander, overhearing a careless remark by Rutherford, at once gave information to the nearest police, and an effort was immediately made to capture the highwaymen who were notorious through the five Australian colonies. McCabe and another policeman entering the bar were promptly detected by the alert Starlight, who simultaneously leveled a revolver, at the head of each officer, for he could shoot as unerringly with his left as with his right. It was a case of being bailed up. McCabe had the misfortune, to tremble before the muzzle of Starlight's revolver, and exhibiting a disinclination to accept the inevitable was shot down without delay. Rutherford and Starlight then fled inconsequently from the scene.

McCabe was shot in the leg, but in a fortnight died from blood poisoning. When the death of the constable was made known, the entire colony sprang to arms. The country was scoured in pursuit of the highwaymen, armed posses roaming from the Queensland border to the Warrego River. At last on Christmas day, 1868, a party surprised and CAPTURED STARLIGHT, who had deserted his mate in crime, in the Gundabooka Mountains. Starlight, who had accumulated a fortune as a road agent, secured the best lawyer in the colony to defend him, retaining Sir Julian Salomans at a princely fee.

The case created intense excitement; and hostile feeling ran high against Starlight, who was indicted under his various aliases of Frank Pearson, otherwise Gordon, otherwise Starlight. In the end Starlight was found guilty of murder, but his attorney managed to have the death sentence commuted to life imprisonment, on account of a long chain of circumstances, chief among which was the plea that Starlight had intentionally shot McCabe in what seemed to be not a vital part.

Through some unexplained means, Starlight secured his release from Darlinghurst jail in 1880, after having served a sentence of only eleven years. He was in jail under other names for

PECULIAR SET OF FURNITURE.

Perhaps the oddest suit of furniture in the world is owned by a certain hotel keeper. For many years he has made it his business to collect match boxes, of which he has now a collection of 4,000. He ordered a skilled cabinet maker to equip a room with furniture made of these boxes. The outfit consists of a writing table with smoking apparatus, a fire screen, a cabinet, a chair and other smaller articles.

to the Coroner at Perth, what was at first regarded as an extraordinary letter, but the communication being turned over to the police set them inquiring. The writer suggested that the deceased might be Frank Gordon, a former fellow-prisoner, to whom he had given, upon Gordon's discharge, from jail, a number of his family papers and photographs.

From his cell in Pentridge jail the real Patrick Edward Pelly described various documents he had given Gordon in 1887, requesting Gordon, upon regaining his liberty to convey the documents to members of the Pelly family. A photograph of "Maj. Pelly, of Perth," being shown to the convict in Pentridge jail, the latter immediately recognized it as that of his quondam friend and jail companion, Frank Gordon, alias Starlight the bushranger, who had served sentences in several Australian jails and to whom he had given his family papers and photographs.

Through jail records the real life of "Maj. Pelly, of Perth," was gradually unfolded. The model civil service clerk had been the most notorious criminal of a preceding generation. The bullet wounds supposed to have been received by "Maj. Pelly" in battle had really been acquired while fleeing before Australian constables on sundry occasions.

Starlight's real name was Frank Pearson. He was born in Mexico of a Spanish mother and an Irish father, and received a great part of his education at Rome. At the time of his death he was 63.

HIS CRIMINAL CAREER
virtually began in 1864, when he joined a gang of West Australian bushrangers, although he had previously had a few picturesque experiences on his own account. He soon became the recognized leader of these bandits of the bush. By his followers he was known as "Capt. Starlight," his profession being most successfully practised after dark. After leading his band of robbers for four years he became associated in 1868 with the notorious road agent Rutherford, and was promoted to the rank of Major, which title he clung to after he had served several terms and settled down to a respectable career, as "Maj. Pelly," the government clerk.

"Starlight" was the Australian Dick Turpin. His picturesque career was the admiration of youths and the terror of children, and not a few adults. When he was caught he used the name Gordon for prison purposes, by which appellation he was known to the real Patrick Edward Pelly.

Queensland was the scene of the most successful operations of Starlight. He roamed the highroads of that colony, to the terror and loss of peaceful citizens traveling from town to town. Many of his most daring exploits were accomplished alone or in company with the equally notorious Rutherford. On one occasion Capt. Starlight held up the mail coach running from Coorabrabran to Coolah, when he robbed all the passengers, ransacked the mail bags, and forced the driver to accompany him to the shack of a dealer and trader. He used the stage driver as a decoy, ordered

In the end Starlight was found guilty of murder, but his attorney managed to have the death sentence commuted to life imprisonment, on account of a long chain of circumstances, chief among which was the plea that Starlight had intentionally shot McCab in what seemed to be not a vital part.

Through some unexplained means Starlight secured his release from Darlinghurst jail in 1880, after having served a sentence of only eleven years. He was in jail under other names for various offenses several times in the ensuing seven years, when at the age of 50 he settled down to respectability as a clerk in the Geological Service. Rutherford remained at large for a long time, and finally shot himself dead in a struggle with the proprietor of the Pine Ridge Hotel. Starlight died from an accidental dose of poison given by "Maj. Pelly" to the most dashing bushranger known in Australian annals.

Dr. Stubbs, a dignified London bishop, was once importuned by a woman who, knowing of his travels in the Holy Land, kept on asking him what places she ought to visit, as she was starting on a trip to Palestine. After answering numerous annoying and useless questions, he was again asked; But, really, what place would you advise me to go to? To Jericho, madam, said the bishop sweetly.

The same thing happens among the Japanese.

A SAD CASE.

"For God's sake, Get Me a Place to Die In."

These words were uttered a few weeks ago by a poor fellow as he lay on his death-bed in a hotel at Gravenhurst. A week before he had travelled a whole day to reach the Sanatorium, but on medical examination it was found that the disease, consumption, was too far advanced to admit him. He tried to get board in Gravenhurst and finally after repeated failures, secured admission to one of the hotels. He soon became worse and the resident physician of the Sanatorium was called in. When it became known that he had consumption, it was found impossible to get attendants to wait on him through fear of contagion. The hostler of the hotel was asked to help and on his refusal he was offered $1 a day extra, but preferred to give up his position rather than expose himself, as he thought, to the danger of infection from the patient. The physician from the Sanatorium had to perform the duties of nurse and maid as well as his own. When the poor fellow found that the management of the hotel wished to get him out he begged the doctor for God's sake to get him a place to die in. The doctor looked after him for some days, remaining with him on his last visit until one o'clock in the morning. The poor sufferer was found dead next day in his bed and beyond the need of further help. Telegrams had been sent to his friends, and his sister reached Gravenhurst only in time to take away the dead body of her brother.

Various proposals have been made to erect suitable structures to commemorate our late beloved Queen. When her Diamond Jubilee was celebrated four years ago large hospital undertakings were begun in London and elsewhere with her special sanction as the best expression of the nation's congratulations. To make it universal, shilling contributions were called for.

The National Sanitarium Association has now provided a place in Gravenhurst for patients who are able to pay, and this has proved its usefulness by saving hundreds of lives since it was opened three years ago. A free hospital for poor patients who cannot pay and who are in the early stages of the disease is now in process of erection near the Sanatorium.

VICTORIA HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

To round up this work the National Sanitarium Association desire to build another hospital near Toronto for incurable consumptives. What better memorial could be erected than a "Victoria Hospital" for such cases? All the large cities, of course, will have their statue of the Queen, but this will not be a national undertaking.

We can, however, have the "Victoria Hospital" under the auspices of the National Sanitarium Association, and this might be built by contributions from all over Canada. Every village and town could send to it

HINTS FOR THE FARMER.

USE AND CARE OF FARM IMPLEMENTS.

In purchasing a farm outfit, it is policy to buy only the best. Remember that every piece bought must be stored and kept in repair, so no unnecessary ones should be purchased. Select only those that seem to be made of the best material, and avoid those that have a lot of levers attachments and springs, as these are more often designed as talking points for the selling agents than for any real practical benefit to the farmer, who is to use the tool. Buy of reliable houses, and buy for cash, as a year's credit is of no advantage to the buyer and has to be roundly paid for in increased price. Steel has taken the place of wood in many parts of the implements now on the market and is a great improvement. Plow beams, cultivator frames and other parts which are likely to be exposed are more durable than when made of wood, which checks and warps from exposure. In selecting, one should look to durability, ease of handling, lightness of draft, and ease of keeping in repair.

In the use of mowers or any other cutting machines, as soon as the knives become dull, every other part is put to a more severe test, the wearing parts grind harder and the propelling power must be increased. The knives should only be started when in good condition and much care should be used in keeping them so. There are many large machines that it is not practical for a farmer to own alone, but that can be owned in company with neighbors and taken from place to place as needed. These machines should have the same man to run them so far as possible and thus guard against accidents. Unless an implement is well cared for, the best results from its use cannot be had. Here comes in the need of a workshop on the farm. Either a building should be built for the purpose or one can be remodeled for use. Two rooms are at least necessary, and three would do better. Making new or repairing carriages, carts and implements is divided into three or more classes or trades and a shop or room for iron-working, one for wood-work and another for painting are needed.

The blacksmith shop should be fitted with a forge, anvil, drills and a vise. Here a horse can be shod, a tire set, and most of the tools on the farm repaired and sharpened. The wood shop should have a good bench with a vise, a grain stone, possibly a lathe and a full set of carpenter tools. The paint shop can be made nearly as useful as the other room, as there are many chances to add to the usefulness of a wagon or implement if a coat of paint or varnish is occasionally given. Very few men realize the importance of varnish in saving a carriage or an implement if it is administered in season. To hire it done is expensive to do it oneself re-

Leave it loose on top of the manure as I directed, and it can be adjusted to suit the wants of the plants.

WINTER SPREAD MANURE.

I do not see how the advocates of the practice of drawing and spreading manure in the winter can claim that it does not waste as much in the field as it does in the yard, says Mr. Day. Why will not the water off of a whole field leach it more than the water from the few square rods of the barnyard? The manure being on top and the lumps projecting up above the snow and being darker than the snow draws the heat, so they thaw out long before the ground is bare. The leaching proceeds and the ground being frozen the water cannot soak in and must run off the surface. As the snow all thaws off several times in the course of the winter the waste in this way must be considerable.

There are almost always one or two rains before the ground thaws out more than 1 in. deep, which washes the manure and very little of the sediment lodges in the soil, as it is already full of water. If the manure is properly piled in the yard where the stock can run on it I do not think it wastes much except on the surface, and on the bottom, where the weight presses the water out, if it is drawn in the spring. I have often had to stop drawing manure in the middle of spring work and wait for the centre of the pile to thaw, and it certainly cannot waste until it thaws. It may be all right farther south, but in this climate I think it is better drawn in the spring, even though it does not get dry enough in the fields to draw it until it is time to begin spring work.

MAKING ICE IN MOLDS.

Where a farmer is not situated to get ice readily from creeks or ponds, it is possible to make it by running water into molds and allowing it to freeze. The best molds are made of

The White Plague.

ONE-SIXTH OF ALL DEATHS DUE TO CONSUMPTION.

Its Ravages Spares No Class—Rich and Poor Alike Fall Its Victims—How This Dread Trouble May be Prevented.

Consumption has been well named the great white plague. One-sixth of all the deaths occurring in Canada annually are due to the ravages of this terrible disease. Its victims are found among all classes; rich and poor alike succumb to its insidious advance. Only a few years ago the victim of consumption was regarded as incurable, and horror stricken friends watched the loved one day by day fade away until death came as a merciful release. Now, however, it is known that taken in its earlier stages consumption is curable, and that by a proper care of the blood—keeping it rich, red and pure—those who are rich, red and pure—those who are pre-disposed to the disease escape its ravages. Consumption is now classed metal, such as galvanized iron and soldered in the proper shape. Many who cannot go to the expense of metal for molds could build of wood. They should be in the following measurements; 24 in. wide, 24 in. long and 18 in. high. The water will freeze quicker and with less danger bursting the molds when they are made than if made with trowel dimension perpendicular.

If built of wood, they may be of inch boards, tongued, grooved and planed smooth on the inside. Boards should be set up in framework, which can be braced at top, bottom and sides so constructed that the whole taken down quickly when the ice is frozen. The only method is to move the molds away from the ice and pour hot water on the outside. With metal molds it requires little to get them loose if properly made, but with wood more difficulty will be experienced.

If the gossip-writer of a paper is to be believed, the King of Belgians is very vain of his personal appearance. farm repaired and sharpened. The wool shop should have a good bench with a vise, a griststone, possibly a lathe and a full set of carpenter tools. The print shop can be made nearly as useful as the other room, as there are many chances to add to the usefulness of a wagon or implement if a coat of paint or varnish is occasionally given. Very few men realize the importance of varnish in saving a carriage or an implement if it is administered in season. To hire it does is expensive to do it oneself requires some skill, but after a little practice it is not difficult. There is no better place to educate the boys or the farm help than in the farm work shop during the winter months or on dull days, and in such a shop as described there is very little but that can be done in the way of repairs, and much can be done in making new also.

HOTBEDS FOR FARMERS.

Most farmers had better let hotbeds alone. As a rule, those who try them are anxious to sell their outfit in a year or two, writes W. L. Anderson. Hotbeds will not suit themselves and the weather is very fickle in early spring. Unless the farmer has someone who can be constantly near and constantly mindful of the hotbed, it won't pay. But if they are cared for and intelligently managed, they yield large profits in both money and pleasure. I advise the farmer who will thus care for the hotbed to have one by all means.

In making it, first get the sash—3x6 ft. is best. Then make the frame to neatly fit the sash. Select the spot for the bed and set the frame on it. Mark the ground, drawing a line entirely around the frame and one foot away from it, so that the pit will be one foot wider on every side than the frame. Set the frame aside and dig the pit about 15 in. deep. Arrange for drainage so that it is not possible for water to stand in it, for standing water will destroy the heat and ruin the bed. Cover the bottom with cornstalks or coarse litter to assist the drainage, then fill in one foot deep with manure tramped down hard. This manure should have been heaped and heated and worked over a time or two before being used. Place the frame now on the manure, sloping it four to six inches to the south. Put in five or six inches more of manure and tramp it well. Let this be fine and the best for the roots of the plants which will bed in it. Now put on four to six inches of rich soil, tramp it well. Loosen up the top, keep the soil on a level. Put on the glass. Fill all around the frame with manure to its very top. Don't plant until the first heat is gone.

The plants will sprout best in the dark. It will be best to cover the glass, but as soon as the plants are through the ground give them light and air. When the plants touch the glass pry up the frame just a little at a time, so as to keep the plants close to the glass. Plants down in a pit will grow spindly. This is where the beginner is sure to make a mistake. They will stake and nail down the frame, making it immovable.

succumb to its insidious advance. Only a few years ago the victim of consumption was regarded as incurable, and horror stricken friends watched the loved one day by day fade away until death came as a merciful release. Now, however, it is known that taken in its earlier stages consumption is curable, and that by a proper care of the blood—keeping it rich, red and pure—those who are rich, red and pure—those who are pre-disposed to the disease escape its ravages. Consumption is now classed among the preventable diseases, and ciated, or show any of the numerous those who are pale, easily tired, emaciated, or show any of the numerous symptoms of general debility should at once fortify the system by enriching and purifying the blood—thus strengthening not only the lungs, but all parts of the body.

Among those who have escaped a threatened death from consumption is Mrs. Robert McCracken, of Marshville, Ont. Mrs. McCracken gives her experience that it may be of benefit to some other sufferer. She says:

"A few years ago I began to experience a general weakness. My appetite was poor; I was very pale; was troubled with shortness of breath and a smothering feeling in my chest. Besides these symptoms I became very nervous, at times dizzy and faint, and my hands and feet would get as cold as ice. As the trouble progressed I began to lose flesh rapidly, and in a short time was only a shadow of my former self. I had good medical treatment, but did not get relief, and as a harsh cough set in I began to fear that consumption had fastened itself upon me. This was strengthened by a knowledge that several of my ancestors had died of this terrible disease. In this rather deplorable condition I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I at once procured a supply and had not taken them long when I noted a change for the better. By the time I had taken six or eight boxes I was able to move around the house again and felt better and stronger in every way. I continued the use of the pills until I had taken a dozen boxes, when all my old time strength and vigor had returned, and I was as well as ever. During the time I was using the pills my weight increased twenty-six pounds. Several years have since passed, and in that time not a symptom of my former trouble has made itself apparent, so that I think I am safe in saying that my cure is permanent. I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life, and I strongly advise ailing women to give them a trial."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic and not a purgative medicine. They enrich the blood from the first dose to the last and thus bring health and strength to every organ in the body. The genuine pills are sold only in boxes with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," printed on the wrapper. If your dealer cannot supply you send direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be mailed post paid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50.

A PLEASANT DISAPPOINTMENT.

A Cheltenham Man is Agreeably Surprised—An Old Grudge Paid.

Mr Turner After a Successful Effort to get Rid of One Enemy Finds that in Doing so he has put away Another.

Cheltenham, Ont., Feb. 4. (Special).—A fortunate man, indeed, is Mr. Charles Turner of this place. For years Mr. Turner has been suffering with kidney disease. It gave him great pain, and for the last two or three years rheumatism has added to his already heavy burden of sickness, and he has seldom known an hour free from pain. Not associating the rheumatism with the old kidney trouble, and despairing of curing the former, Mr. Turner bought and used Dodd's Kidney Pills to try and dispose of the kidney trouble. He used a few boxes, and the pain in his back kept getting less and less, and finally went away. All the unpleasant symptoms of kidney trouble disappeared, and what was still more strange to Mr. Turner, he has not since been bothered with rheumatism.

He is so grateful for the miraculous results of the treatment that he has been cheerfully telling his friends and neighbors his experience. He says: "Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured me of a long standing case of kidney rheumatism, and although I took the pills for the kidney trouble I was surprised to find that when this disease was cured the rheumatism also disappeared. I have not been troubled since. I used in all six boxes. The first two boxes did not appear to do me any good, but I persevered and the result is that I am now a healthy man."

Of course, to those who recognize rheumatism as what it really is, a symptom of kidney disease, there is nothing wonderful about Mr. Turner's experience. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Kidney Trouble, and with it Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lame Back, Neuralgia, Heart Trouble, Dropsy, Diabetes, Bright's Disease and any of the other many forms in which it may

Most of the railway companies now have the carriage cushions and carpets cleaned by the compressed air system. This saves the wear and tear consequent on cleaning them with brooms and brushes. Besides, armed with a single air-cleaner, one man can clean three cushions in the time it took to clean one by the old method. At many of the loco. works, too, boiler-seams are closed by the same plan. The air has a force equal to 10,000 taps of the hammer, and does the work very quickly and effectively.

The London Metropolitan and District Railways are taking traction on their lines. Tenders for the undertaking have been invited by Sir Wm. Preece, the companies' consulting engineer, from American as well as British firms. Over fifty miles of line are involved, and the cost of changing the system from steam power to electric is estimated at one million sterling. It is expected that, when once the work of alteration is commenced, it will take about eighteen months to complete the new system.

An independent company will petition the British Parliament next year for sanction to construct a submarine tunnel under the Solent in order to establish railway communication between the mainland and the Isle of Wight. It is proposed to start the tunnel at Hurst Castle, a point which projects well out into the Solent, being about two miles from Totland Bay, where the tunnel will end. It will be constructed of tubes larger but similar in design to those employed in making the London Central Electric Railway. The cost of carrying out the scheme is estimated at £70,000, and will take about two and a half years to complete, after the necessary Act of Parliament has been passed.

UNDERGROUND WORKERS.

We rely Four and a Half Million People Who Delve in the Earth for a Living

According to a recent computation made in France there are 4,350,000 persons of both sexes who spend their lives procuring from the earth such indispensable products as coal, metals and salt, which cannot be classed among the necessities. Most of these toilers spend their working hours far below the surface. Not many years ago the treatment which thousands of them received, and particularly the women and children who toiled in the deep coal mines in Great Britain, became a public scandal. The adoption of humane laws led to a change in the disgraceful conditions under which they worked and lived. The miners of the world have now a pleasant existence compared with that which they led a few decades ago.

In no part of the world are there so many underground workers, in proportion to total population, as in

RAILWAY RUMBLINGS.*Some Interesting News About the World's Railways.

The ground over which the London and North-Western Railway runs extends from London in the south to Carlisle in the north, and from Cambridge in the east to Holyhead in the west, a distance of 300 miles in length by 200 miles in breadth.

When locomotives were first built the driver gave notice of his approach by blowing a tin horn. Several mishaps occurred, however, through the horn not being heard. George Stephenson thereupon invented the contrivance which, when attached to the boiler and the steam turned on, gave out the shrill whistle with which everyone is so familiar.

Colenso railway bridge over the Tugela, which it will be remembered was blown up by the Boers at the commencement of the campaign, was the largest on the Natal Government Railways. It consisted of five spans, each 105ft. in length, the width being 16ft., and was built in 1877. Frere Bridge, which was also destroyed by the Boers, only consisted of two 105ft. spans.

Two hundred miles of the southern section of the Manchurian Railways were destroyed by the Chinese at the commencement of the "Boxer" rebellion. All the station buildings have been burned down and a large number of engines and much rolling-stock destroyed, the damage being estimated at over £2,000,000. The repairs of the line will probably cost about £1,200 per mile.

From the year 1829—when George Stephenson's "Rocket" won the prize of £700 offered by the directors of the Liverpool and Manchester Railway Company, by travelling at the rate of twenty-five and thirty-five miles an hour—to the end of 1880 it is estimated that £720,000,000 was expended on railways in the United Kingdom. The gross annual receipts amounted to £62,000,000 and the net earnings to about £30,000,000.

"Mrs. Vrooman," who is quite an aged lady, stood the ordeal very bravely and at last report was doing as well as could be expected.

To be Prepared

For war is the surest way for this nation to maintain peace. This is the opinion of the wisest statesmen. It is equally true that to be prepared for spring is the best way to avoid the peculiar dangers of the season. This is a lesson multitudes are learning, and at this time, when the blood is sure to be loaded with impurities and to be weak and sluggish, the millions begin to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, expels all disease germs, creates a good appetite, gives strength and energy and puts the whole system in a healthy condition, preventing pneumonia, fevers, and other dangerous diseases which are liable to attack a weakened system.

A Sudden Death.

On Friday last Lucy Wager, relict of the late William R. Miller, died at her son's, Nathan Miller, Macdonald, at the advanced age of 84 years. Deceased leaves a grown up family of three sons and four daughters to mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother. She had resided upon the farm where she died for the past 50 years. The funeral, which took place on Monday, was largely attended, showing the high esteem in which the departed was held. The remains were placed in the vault at Napane. Rev. H. I. Allen conducted the services.

Prof. Vernon, a hypnotist of no renown, gave exhibitions of his power at the opera house this week, and succeeded in convincing some of the skeptics of wonderful and amusing feats. ## Runaway.

On Sunday evening last Mr. and Mrs. Neil Mathewson, Mill street, who had been spending the day with friends in Deseronto, were preparing to drive home, the horse became uneasy and started up before Mr. Mathewson could get properly into the cutter. He grabbed the lines, but unfortunately too late to avert the rig smashing into a high crossing near Malley's drug store. The occupants were both thrown out, Mr. Mathewson being violently thrown against a tree, receiving a nasty gash in his forehead. Mrs. Mathewson was more fortunate, receiving slight injuries. A doctor was called in and attended the injuries, after which they drove home.

The Queen Herself the Author.

The Herald, yesterday, gave a review of the forthcoming Life and Reign of Queen Victoria, to be published by the World Publishing Company, of Guelph. It is now learned that the World Publishing Company have purchased the Canadian copyright of the latest published work Her Majesty wrote, namely, "More Leaves From the Journal of a Life in the Highlands." The World Publishing Company will add this to their book without change of price. Imagine such authors, namely, Her Majesty the Queen, Dr. John Coulter and John A. Cooper, editor of the Canadian Magazine. This will make the book about 700 pages, quality never equalled, and only $1.75 in price.—Guelph Herald, Jan. 26th, 1901.

Says, in speaking of the part taken by the Canadians at the battle of Paardeberg, that it was their forward position which was the final move that compelled Commandant Cronje to lay down his arms on the anniversary of Majuba Day. The Weekly Globe is enabling its yearly subscribers to hand down to their children an excellent memento of that important event by presenting them with a cleverly executed picture which conveys a very correct idea of the Boer laager and the position of the Canadian troops at that time. Mr. Frederick Hamilton, The Globe's correspondent, and others, who were eyewitnesses, express the greatest satisfaction with the picture, and it certainly is worthy of that journal's enterprise in making it possible to keep the event ever in memory. The picture can be secured by becoming a subscriber of The Weekly Globe, at the regular price. The picture can be seen at that office.

Queen Victoria's Death.

There never was such interest aroused over the death of one monarch and the accession of another as in the case of Victoria and Edward VII. The Family Herald and Weekly Star, of Montreal, is being widely complimented on the splendid way it reported and treated of these two important events. No other paper on the American continent even approached the Family Herald and Weekly Star in the completeness of its reports and profuseness of its illustrations. The circulation of the Family Herald is increasing by leaps and bounds. It is no wonder. A paper that is so superbly equipped for all emergencies deserves success.

Obituary.

It is with deep feelings of regret that we are called upon this week to chronicle the death of John Rhodes Tilley, who passed away on Wednesday, Feb. 6th, at his residence on Mill street, aged 63 years. Deceased had been a resident of Napanee for a number of years and was highly respected by all who knew him. The funeral will take place this (Friday) afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late residence. Service will be held at the house after which the procession will proceed to the Eastern cemetery, where the remains will be placed in the vault. The interment will take place later on in the family plot at Belleville beside his mother.

BRISK FEBRUARY SELLING!

Good advice is that of those who have traded at the Big Store, for they'll tell you to do likewise. It means money saved and satisfaction. Every article we sell is an argument in favor of Big Store methods.

There is a limit to low price and high price—and below the one and above the other is poor economy. "The Big Store with the little prices" strikes the happy medium and saves you money, not alone in the CHEAPNESS of its prices, but in the reliable quality of its goods.

February selling is brisk, and why not? We're clearing out winter stocks—emptying the shelves for spring goods. Some mighty low prices necessary, and some mighty low prices we're making. We've provided specials in every department for your choosing. Will you choose?

If you buy it at the BIG STORE—YOU'RE SAFE.

Correct Dress Materials!

It is generally conceded that the latest Fabrics in high grade Dress Goods are shown in this store at the most pleasing prices within your reach—a fact which may be attributed to our determined efforts to keep fully apace with all innovations in fashionable dress material styles, qualities and prices to satisfy everybody. A few suggestions:—

The Crescent Brand and Priestley's Black Dress Goods, and Seabelle Serges—plain cloths of all the popular fancies at 25c, 35c, 40c, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00 to $2.50 yd.

GOLF CAPES CORRECT CORSETS!

Ready-to-wear and made to order. The fashions are decidedly new and effective. Best to come and see them, though. The enjoyment is yours while the collection is fresh and unbroken. Prices:

Rugs at $3.50 and $6.00, Golf Capes at $5.00 to $9.00 each.

When planning for a new Dress don't forget that a Proper-fitting Corset is essential to the correct fit and general pleasing effect of the costume.

The desirable models can be found here. Prices: 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, $1.00 and $1.25, etc.

Some Falling Clothing Prices!

Prices tell part of the story of what this sale can do for you in saving you Clothing money. The rest of the story the goods will tell you when you come to buy.

THE MEMORIAL SERVICES.

Funeral of Queen Victoria Appropriately Observed in Napanee.

The memorial services in connection with the death of Her Majesty were held in the Eastern Methodist church and in the church of St. Mary Magdalene on Saturday last. Nearly all the places of business in the town were closed and the streets as quiet as on a Sunday.

The services were held in the Eastern Methodist church in the morning at 11 o'clock, being a united service of the congregations of the Presbyterian, Western Methodist churches.

The church was very beautifully draped, the organ and organ being draped in front and organ being draped in front of the pulpit. A large portrait of the Queen with the frame in black was also placed in front of the pulpit. The mayor, town councillors, officers and the members of Argyle, I.O.O.F., and visiting brethren marched in procession to the church. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. McCreary, assisted by Revs. W. Bryers, W. Fansworth, Bartlett and Peck.

McIntyre addressed the congregation on "The home life of Queen Victoria."

Bartlett on "Her Influence on Society," and Rev. Peck on "Her Official Duties." The services proved very interesting and instructive. The choir was led by members of the choirs of the Episcopalian and Western churches.

AT ST. MARY MAGDALENE'S CHURCH,

Services were held in this church at 3 p.m., the church being crowded to its full capacity, a large number of people turned away. At 2 p.m. a large session was formed on the market hall by the Mayor. ### ..HOCKEY..

The following is a summary of the games played in the Quinte District Hockey League this week.

Napanee 5, Deseronto 3.

The sixth scheduled game was played at Deseronto on Tuesday evening, Napanee being the visiting team. About one hundred enthusiasts accompanied the boys on their trip and showed their appreciation of the good hockey that Napanee are playing. About 8.15 the rink was well filled with spectators, and at 8.30 the teams lined up as follows:—

DESERONTO	NAPANEE
T. Culhane.....	Goal.
W. Cole.....	Point.
D. McDonald.....	Cover Point.
W. Greene.....	P. Wager
D. Greene.....	Forwards.
B. Rorke.....	C. Templeton
H. Hatch.....	E. Lake
	R. Young
	B. Williams
	Referee—J. T. Sutherland, Kingston.

Young secured the puck from scratch, passed to the wing, and after a minute scored the first goal for Napanee. Almost the same identical lines were followed up and inside of three minutes they scored again, Deseronto seeming to be bewildered by the clever combination work of their opponents' forward line. After that the home team awakened and after a hard struggle scored. Each team secured another goal, the score at half time being Napanee 3, Deseronto 2.

In the second half the play was much faster and a very pretty game of hockey was witnessed by the large crowd in attendance. Napanee was the first to tally one, Deseronto soon following suit. A hard struggle for supremacy then ensued as they only had about eight minutes to play and a goal at that critical stage of the game meant good deal to either team, Napanee finally scoring and clinching the game. Five more minutes were played before time was called, the score standing 5-3 in favor of Napanee. Mr. Sutherland made a very efficient referee, the crowd present being well pleased with his rulings.

Napanee 12, Deseronto 0

The seventh scheduled game and the last home game for Napanee was played here on Thursday evening, resulting in a complete Waterloo for the visiting team. The local forward line showed superior combination work and the defence was superb. The first half resulted in a score of 5-0, the second being 7-0. The superior work in goal by Culhane for Deseronto saved them from a far worse defeat, as he stopped shot after shot in a very clever manner. W. Greene was unfortunate in getting hurt in the first half, Williams being laid off to even matters up. After some delay the teams lined up at 9 o'clock as follows:

T. Culhane.....	Goal.
	A. Hicks
